Dobrovoljci v srbskih osvobodilnih vojnah 1804–1918

Petstotletno srbsko suženjstvo pod Turki je zaznamovano tudi z nenehnim bojem Srbov za ohranitev njihove identitete in narodne osvoboditve. V tem boju je bila zelo pomembna vloga dobrovoljcev. V daljših časovnih obdobjih je bilo dobrovoljstvo edina možnost in priložnost Srbov, da so se z orožjem upirali turškemu zavojevanju in pokorščini. Pri tem je bila prevladujoča vloga Srbov, ki so bili z okupiranih turških območij pregnani na avstro-ogrsko ozemlje. Ti so tudi sodelovali v vojnah Avstro-Ogrske proti Turkom za obrambo njenih meja in ozemelj, pa tudi v osvajanju tistih pod turško oblastjo.

Srbi so trdno verjeli in upali, da bodo s sodelovanjem v vojnah Avstrije proti Turčiji izbojevali in osvobodili tudi svoje dežele in ozemlje pod turško zasedbo. Zgodovina dokazuje množično sodelovanje Srbov v avstro-ogrskih vojnah proti Turčiji od leta 1683 do 1699 in od 1716 do 1718.

Organizirani samostojni boji Srbov proti turški zasedbi so se začeli šele leta 1804. Trajali so vse do leta 1912, ko je bila Turčija v prvi balkanski vojni prvič popolnoma poražena in je izgubila položaj balkanske in celo evropske velesile.

Osvobodilna vojna Srbije proti Turčiji je tako trajala 108 let. V navedenem obdobju sta boj Srbov in prizadevanja Srbije dobra izkoristili tudi Avstrija in Rusija za uveljavitev

Military-Historical Outline

Volunteers in Serbian Liberation Wars, 1804-1918

The five hundred years that the Serbs spent under Turkish rule have been marked by their ongoing struggle to preserve national identity and achieve national liberation. Volunteers have been very important in this struggle. For a very long time, volunteers were the only possible means for the Serbs to fight against Turkish invasions. Those Serbs, who were displaced from regions occupied by Turks to Austro-Hungarian territory, played a dominant role in this matter. Furthermore, they participated in Austro-Hungarian wars against the Turks, the objective of which was the defence of Austro-Hungarian borders and territories and the conquest of territories that were under Turkish rule.

The Serbs firmly believed and hoped that their participation in Austria's wars against Turkey would help them win and liberate the Serbian lands and territories occupied by Turks. From 1683 to 1699 and from 1716 to 1718, history witnessed a mass participation of Serbs in Austro-Hungarian wars against Turkey.

It was only in 1804, that the Serbs started to organise independent fights against the Turkish occupation. The fights lasted until 1912, when, for the first time, Turkey was utterly defeated in the First Balkan War, losing the position of the Balkans and even the then European superpower.

The Serbian War of Independence against Turkey lasted for 108 years. During the said period, from 1804 to 1912, Austria and Russia fully exploited the Serbs' struggle and efforts to promote their own svojih interesov. Turčija je bila otomansko cesarstvo, ki se je stoletja bojevalo s cesarsko Rusijo in avstrijsko monarhijo. V teh vojnah so bili prav Srbi vedno izkoriščani kot vojaki, za nagrado pa so dobivali obljube, ki niso bile nikoli izpolnjene. Poraženci in zmagovalci v medsebojnih vojnah treh cesarstev so vsakokrat sproščali svojo jezo nad Srbi in pozabljali na obljube.

Rusija je strateško vedno iskala zavezništvo s Srbijo, da bi dosegla svoje cilje in interese – izhod na Jadransko morje (kar se ni spremenilo do danes), Avstro-Ogrska pa je v Srbiji videla samo del turškega ozemlja, ki ga ima pravico zavzeti v svojem osvajalnem pohodu proti vzhodu (ali Drang nach Osten, ki je še vedno aktualen).

Aneksija Bosne in Hercegovine 1908 je pomnila tudi avstro-ogrsko agresijo na Srbijo, seveda v soglasju s tedanjimi evropskimi velesilami. V takšnih razmerah je Srbija, skupaj z Bolgarijo in Grčijo, pripravila in bojevala vojno proti Turčiji. Šlo je za t. i. prvo balkansko vojno od leta 1912 do 1913. V tej vojni sta bila izpod turške zadedbe osvobojena Makedonija in Kosovo. Toda Bolgarija ni bila zadovoljna, zato je leta 1913 proti Srbiji začela drugo balkansko vojno s ciljem, da si pripoji vzhodno Makedonijo.

Avstro-Ogrska je pričakovala srbski poraz v vojni s Turčijo, da bi nato lahko sama zavzela Srbijo. To se ni zgodilo, zato je Avstro-Ogrska nagovorila Bolgarijo, naj čimprej napade Srbijo brez vojne napovedi in si prisvoji vzhodno Makedonijo. Močna srbska vojska je brez težav opravila z verolomnimi Bulgari, zato se je Avstro-Ogrska začela mrzlično pripravljati na kaznovanje nevšečnih Srbov.

Boje srbskega naroda za osvoboditev so z naklonjenostjo spremljali po vsem svetu, posebej slovanski narodi. Slovenci niso bili izjeme. Te simpatije in izrazi solidarnosti so pripomogli k množičnemu udejstvovanju dobrovoljcev z vsega sveta za odločilen boj proti turški zasedbi srbskega etničnega ozemlja.

Vodstvo prvega srbskega upora je že leta 1805 sprejelo odlok, po katerem so v uporniške (četniške) enote sprejemali vse Srbe zunaj beograjskega pašaluka, in tudi vse druge, ki so želeli pomagati Srbom v boju proti Turčiji. Tako je dve leti pozneje (1807) v boju med Srbi in Turki na Štubiku sodelovala ruska bojna enota in 200 grških dobrovoljcev. Od takrat specific interests. Turkey, or the Ottoman Empire, had been fighting with the Russian Empire and the Austrian Monarchy for centuries. In these wars the Serbs were exploited as soldiers, getting nothing more than empty promises in return. Both the losers and the winners of the wars of the three empires were venting their anger on the Serbs and usually forgot to fulfil their promises.

With a view of attaining its goals and interests – a passage to the Adriatic Sea (this remains unchanged up to the present time), Russia has always been seeking alliance with Serbia in strategic terms. On the other hand, Austria-Hungary saw nothing more in Serbia than a part of the Turkish territory it believed it was entitled to occupy during its conquest of the West (or Drang nach Osten, which is still topical).

The accession of Bosnia and Herzegovina in 1908 was an indicator of the Austro-Hungarian aggression on Serbia approved by the then European superpowers. In such conditions, together with Bulgaria and Greece, Serbia prepared and declared war against Turkey. This was the so-called First Balkan War, which lasted from 1912 to 1913. During this war, Macedonia and Kosovo had been liberated from Turkish occupation. Nonetheless, Bulgaria was not satisfied and, consequently, with intent to annex Eastern Macedonia started the Second Balkan War against Serbia in 1913.

Austria-Hungary anticipated Serbia's defeat in the war with Turkey and afterwards planned to occupy Serbia itself. Since this did not happen, it talked Bulgaria into quickly attacking Serbia without any prior declaration of war and into annexing Eastern Macedonia. The strong Serbian Army easily defeated the promise-breaking Bulgarians, for which reason Austria-Hungary began feverish preparations to punish the disliked Serbs.

The entire world and in particular the Slavic peoples, observed Serbian combats for national liberation with sympathy. Slovenians were no exception. These sympathies and expressions of solidarity contributed to a mass recruitment of volunteers from across the world with a view of participating in the decisive fight against the Turkish occupation of Serbian ethnic space.

In 1805 already, the leadership of the first Serbian resistance adopted a decree on the admission of all Serbs outside the Belgrade pashalic (a Turkish administrative zone governed by a pasha) as well as those who would like to help the Serbs, to the resistance (chetnik) units, in their fight against the Turks. Two years later (in 1807) a Russian battle unit and 200 Greek volunteers participated in a izvira veliko prijateljstvo Srbov z Rusi in Grki, ki še vedno traja. Leta 1808 je iz avstro-ogrške vojske dezertiralo 515 vojakov (predvsem Srbov), ki so se vključili v srbsko vojsko kot dobrovoljci. Pridružilo se ji je 800 bolgarskih dobrovoljcev, pa tudi iz Boke Kotorske 37 črnogorskih dobrovoljcev, ki jih je vodil Subotić Gavrilov.

V bosansko-hercegovskem uporu Srbov 1875–1878 je sodelovalo več dobrovoljcev iz Srbije, Črne gore, Hrvaške in Slovenije (3). Od Slovencev se je najbolj izkazal Ljubljanačan Viktor Merlak v bojih ob Drini, za kar je prejel Karađorđeve zvezdo z meči. Sodelovala sta še poznejši polkovnik srbske vojske Janko Stibilj – Vukasović in novinar Aleksander Toman, ki je o dogodkih poročal slovenski javnosti. Ko je 1876 Srbija napovedala vojno Turčiji, so ji priskočili na pomoč številni dobrovoljci iz vse Evrope. Zato je poveljstvo srbske vojske celo ustanovilo posebno vojaško enoto – dobrovoljski korpus. Sredi julija 1876 je iz Italije prispeло 30 dobrovoljcev – garibaldincev.

Dotok dobrovoljcev v srbsko vojsko se je nadaljeval v obdobju obeh balkanskih vojn v letih 1912 in 1913. Zanimivo je poudariti, da so tedaj srbski narod podpirali tudi posamezniki iz vrst turškega naroda in muslimanske (mohamedanske) veroizpovedi. Ko so Bolgari junija 1913 brez napovedi napadli Srbijo, je več Turkov prosilo za sprejem v srbsko vojsko. Med njimi je bil tudi poročnik turške vojske Džafer Bej, ki je pripeljal s seboj 210 dobrovoljcev mohamedanske vere. Njegova enota se je pogumno bojevala na srbski strani, saj je konec vojne dočakalo samo 40 njegovih borcev. Seveda je poročnik Džafer Bej prejel zlato medaljo za pogum Miloša Obilića.

Tudi preprosti ljudje drugih narodnosti in veroizpovedi so podpirali boj srbskega naroda. Ko so junija 1913 v Plevljah muslimanski verniki, bilo jih je približno 3.000, molili za srbsko zmago proti Bolgarom, se je Hadži Beg Bajrović postavil za vodjo približno 100 mlađih Turkov – dobrovoljcev, hkrati se je več kot 150 turških deklet prijavilo za bolničarke.

Prva svetovna vojna se je začela avgusta 1914 z ultimativnim napadom Avstro-Ogrske na izmučeno Srbijo. Prvi dobrovoljci v srbski vojski so bili tedaj vsi tisti, ki so se kot takšni bojevali v balkanskih vojnah, pa tudi avstro-ogrski državljeni, ki so se po naključju znašli v Srbiji.

combat between the Serbs and the Turks in Štubik. This is when Serbia's great (and still lasting) friendship with the Russians and the Greeks started. In 1808, 515 soldiers (mostly Serbs) deserted from the Austro-Hungarian Army and joined the Serbian Army as volunteers. 800 Bulgarian volunteers and Gavrilo Subotić with 37 Montenegrin volunteers from Boka Kotorska also joined the Serbian rebels in the Serbian Army.

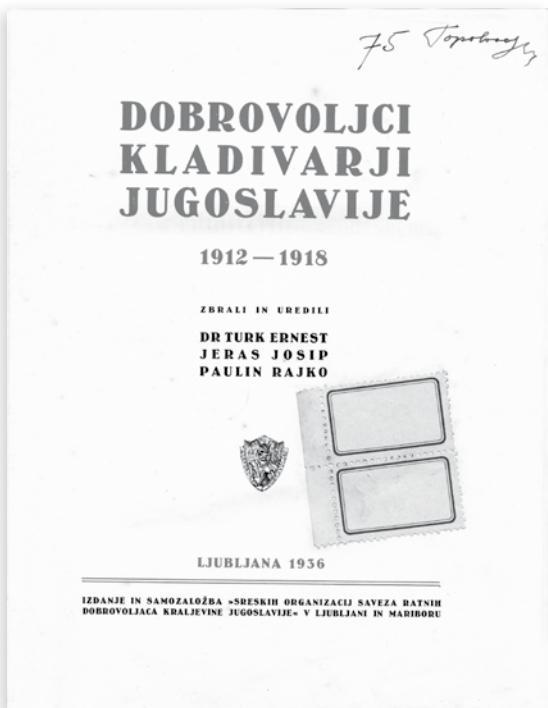

A large number of volunteers from Serbia, Montenegro, Croatia and Slovenia (3) participated in the resistance of Serbs in Bosnia-Herzegovina between 1875 and 1878. The Slovenians that excelled the most were: Viktor Merlak, an inhabitant of Ljubljana, excelled in the Battle of Drina, for which he was awarded Karađorđe's Star with Swords, the later Colonel of the Serbian Army Janko Stibilj – Vukasović and a journalist, Aleksander Toman, who reported the events to the Slovenian public. When Serbia declared war on Turkey in 1876, numerous volunteers from all across Europe came to help. To that end, the command of the Serbian Army established a special military unit – the volunteer corps. In mid July 1876, 30 volunteers (Garibaldi's soldiers) arrived from Italy.

Even during both Balkan Wars, from 1912 to 1913, the inflow of volunteers to the Serbian Army continued. It is interesting that in this period, the Serbian nation was supported also by certain members of the Turkish nation and Muslim individuals. In June 1913, when Bulgarians attacked Serbia without any prior notice, a large number of Turks requested recruitment into the Serbian Army. One of them was Džafer Bej, a Lieutenant of the Turkish Army, who brought with him 210 Muslim volunteers. His unit fought bravely for the Serbian side, since only 40 of his soldiers witnessed the end of the war. Lieutenant Džafer Bej was awarded a Miloš Obilić Gold Medal for Bravery.

The common people of other nations and religions also supported the struggle of the Serbian nation. When, in June 1913 in Plevlje, the 3,000 Muslims prayed for Serbian victory over the Bulgarians, Hadži Bajrović became the leader of approximately 100 young Turkish volunteers, while, at the same time, over 150 Turkish girls volunteered as nurses.

The First World War actually started in August 1914 when the Austro-Hungarian Empire attacked an exhausted Serbia. The first volunteers in the Serbian Army were those volunteers who fought in the Balkan Wars and Austro-Hungarian citizens who, by chance, were in Serbia at the time.

The second wave of volunteers included citizens

Drugi val dobrovoljcev so bili državljeni Avstro-Ogrske, ki so po začetku svetovne vojne bežali v Srbijo iz različnih vzrokov. Šlo je predvsem za pripadnike srbskega naroda, ki so živeli v bližnjih avstro-ogrskih pokrajinah (Lika, Bosna, Banat in druge) in sosednjih državah. Med njimi so bili tudi pripadniki avstro-ogrsko vojske in številni ujetniki, ki so v srbsko vojsko prestopili kot dobrovoljci. Prevladovali so pripadniki slovanskih narodov.

Tretji val dobrovoljcev so predstavljali pripadniki avstro-ogrsko vojske, ki so prešli na rusko stran ali pa so jih zajeli v ujetništvo na rusko–avstro-ogrski fronti v Galiciji in Karpatih od leta 1915 naprej. Ta kategorija dobrovoljcev je bila tudi najbolj številčna in za srbsko vojsko najbolj pomembna, saj je šlo za preizkušene vojake in častnike. Na množično dobrovoljsko gibanje so vplivale tudi različne ideje o boju za skupno državo vseh južnih Slovanov, predvsem pa Srbov, Hrvatov in Slovencev. Šlo je predvsem za ideje predstavnikov posameznih narodov, kakor tudi za zamisli različnih organizacij (sokoli) in tajnih združenj (Preporodovcev).

Posebna kategorija dobrovoljcev so bili pripadniki avstro-ogrsko vojske na italijansko–avstro-ogrski fronti, ki so prehajali na nasprotno stran ali pa so postali ujetniki italijanske vojske. Del njih se je opredeljeval za osvoboditev Slovenije in Hrvaške izpod avstro-ogrsko monarhije (bataljon kapetana Pivka), del pa za of Austria-Hungary who, after the beginning of the First World War, fled to Serbia for various reasons. Most of them were members of the Serbian nation who lived in the neighbouring Austro-Hungarian regions (Lika, Bosna, Banat and others) and neighbouring countries. Among them were members of the Austro-Hungarian Army and numerous prisoners who joined the Serbian Army as volunteers. As expected, the members of the Slavic nations were in majority.

The third wave of volunteers included the members of the Austro-Hungarian Army that joined the Russian side or were captured at the Russian – Austro-Hungarian front in Galicia and in the Carpathian Mountains after 1915. The category of volunteers mentioned was the most numerous and the most important for the Serbian Army, as it was composed of experienced soldiers and officers. The massive volunteer movement has been influenced by various ideas of the fight for a joint country of all South Slavs, mainly of Serbs, Croats and Slovenians. These were mainly ideas of representatives of individual nations and ideas of various organisations (Sokol Organisation) and secret associations (Preporod Movement).

The members of the Austro-Hungarian Army at the Italian – Austro-Hungarian front that joined the opposite side or became prisoners of the Italian Army were a special category of volunteers. Some of them had supported the liberation of Slovenia and Croatia from being under the Austro-Hungarian Monarchy (Captain Pivko's Battalion), and others had been in favour of the volunteers in the Serbian Army (from the Nocera Umbra prisoner camp).

In political and propaganda terms the most welcome had been the relatively numerous volunteers of expatriates from overseas, mainly from the USA and South America. Their patriotism and solidarity proved that they had indeed preserved patriotic bonds with their home towns which trembled under the foreign military yoke.

It is quite understandable that Serbia was more than interested in the weakening national consciousness of the Austro-Hungarian soldiers of Serbian, Croatian and Slovenian nationality. This was achieved in various ways, but the basic idea was always to defend the Slavic nations against the aggressive Germanic peoples, and to form a joint Yugoslav state. Serbia encouraged individual and mass desertion of Austro-Hungarian soldiers and units, in particular. At the beginning, the desertion was a mass phenomenon in Russia, but later started to diminish due to the October Revolution.

dobrovoljce srbske vojske (iz ujetniškega tabořiča Nocere Umbre).

Politično in propagandno so bili najbolj dobrodošli dokaj številni dobrovoljci – izseljeni iz prekomorskih dežel, predvsem ZDA in Južne Amerike. Njihov patriotizem in solidarnost sta bila zares na zavidljivi ravni in hkrati dokaz, da niso pretrgali domoljubne vezi z domačimi kraji, ki so ječali pod tujim vojaškim jarmom.

Povsem razumljivo je, da je bila Srbija zelo zainteresirana za buditev nacionalne zavesti med avstro-ogrskimi vojaki srbske, hrvaške in slovenske narodnosti. Izvajala jo je različno, osnovna je bila ideja o obrambi slovanskih narodov pred agresivnimi Germani, še posebej o skupni jugoslovanski državi. Srbija je predvsem spodbujala posamično in množično deserterstvo avstro-ogrskih vojakov in enot, ki je bilo v Rusiji na začetku množično, pozneje pa je zaradi oktobrske revolucije in drugih razlogov začelo usihati.

Ko je pred javnost stopil t. i. Jugoslovanski odbor, ustanovljen 30. aprila 1915 v Londonu, s predsednikom dr. Antejem Trumbićem, je bila tudi v javnem pozivu srbske vlade (in vojske) na prvem mestu ideja jugoslovanske osvoboditve in združitve, šele na drugem mestu pa srbska nacionalna revolucija – srbska osvobodilna vojna.

Predvidevanje srbske vlade in Jugoslovenskega odbora, da bo ideja o »jugoslovanski osvoboditvi« spodbudila množični prehod avstro-ogrskih vojakov na rusko in srbsko stran, se ni povsem uresničila. Sledil je namreč množični prehod avstro-ogrskih vojakov na rusko, ne pa tudi na srbsko stran. Najbolj poveden primer se je zgodil po srbski zmagi v cerski in kolubarski bitki, ko je bilo ujetih 566 častnikov in 56.000 vojakov avstro-ogrsko vojske. Med njimi je bilo tudi približno 10.000 Hrvatov, od katerih se je samo 22 dobrovoljcev prijavilo v srbsko vojsko.

Srbija je pod pritiskom Rusije in Jugoslovenskega odbora privolila v organizirano ustavljanje dobrovoljskih enot, ki bi jih sestavliali ujeti avstro-ogrski vojaki – Srbi, Hrvati in Slovenci. Dobrovoljske enote bi potem prenestili na solunsko fronto in bi sodelovale pri osvoboditvi Srbije.

Tako je bila 16. (29.) aprila 1916 v Odesi vzpostavljena Prva srbska dobrovoljska divizija. Sestavljali so jo dve dobrovoljski brigadi, vsaka z dvema polkoma, gorski topniški

When the so-called Yugoslav Committee, presided by Ante Trumbić and established on 30 April 1915 in London, emerged in public, the idea of the Yugoslav liberation and merger was announced in the Serbian Government's (and the Army's) public call as the first announcement, while the Serbian national revolution (the Serbian liberation front) was announced as the second.

The prediction of the Serbian Government and the Yugoslav Committee that the idea of the "Yugoslav liberation" would cause the Austro-Hungarian soldiers to massively join the Russian and Serbian side was not completely realised. What happened was that a lot of Austro-Hungarian soldiers decided to fight on the Russian side, but not on the Serbian side. The most known event occurred after the Serbian victory in the Battle of Cer and the Battle of Kolubara, when 566 Austro-Hungarian Army officers and 56,000 soldiers were captured. Out of approximately 10,000 Croats that had also been among them, only 22 decided to join the Serbian Army as volunteers.

Under the pressure of Russia and the Yugoslav Committee, Serbia consented to an organised establishment of volunteer units composed of the captured Austro-Hungarian soldiers – Serbs, Croats and Slovenians. Afterwards, the voluntary units were supposed to be transferred to the Macedonian Front (also known as Salonika Front) to participate in the battles for Serbia's liberation.

As a result, the 1st Serbian Volunteer Division was formed in Odessa on 16 (or 29) April 1916. It was composed of two volunteer brigades, each consisting of two regiments, a mountain artillery division, headquarter units and supplying units. It had 555 officers and 18,457 experienced non-commissioned officers and trained soldiers.

The 1st Serbian Volunteer Division remained in Dobrudja for another 45 days after its establishment. Under pressure from Russia and Romania, the division which was unprepared for combat was recklessly sent to the battlefield to fight the experienced Bulgarian, Turkish and German units. During the twenty days of bloody combats, the division has been halved; 2,000 officers and soldiers were killed and over 8,000 were wounded.

The defeat of the 1st Serbian Volunteer Division negatively influenced the further development of the volunteer movement in Russia. Many abandoned the volunteer assemblies and joined the Russian side (somewhat later they also joined the side of the Red Army and the antirevolutionary units of the White Guards), while the soldiers (prisoners) even returned to the Austro-Hungarian Army. The propaganda divizion, štabne in preskrbovalne enote. Štela je 555 častnikov ter 18.457 izkušenih podčastnikov in izurjenih vojakov.

Prva srbska dobrovoljska divizija je po ustanovitvi še 45 dni ostala v Dobrudži. Pod pritiskom Rusije in Romunije je bila bojno nepripravljena poslana na bojišče proti izkušenim bolgarskim, turškim in nemškim enotam. V krvavih bojih, ki so trajali dvanajst dni, je bila divizija preplovljena, saj je padlo 2000, ranjenih pa je bilo 8000 častnikov in vojakov.

Poraz prve srbske dobrovoljske divizije je izjemno negativno vplival na nadaljnji razvoj dobrovoljskega gibanja v Rusiji. Številni so zapuščali dobrovoljska zbirališča, prehajali so na rusko stran (pozneje tudi na stran Rdeče armade, pa tudi v protirevolucionarne enote belih), vojaki – ujetniki so se celo vračali v avstro-ogrsko vojsko. Okrepila se je propagandna in obveščevalna dejavnost avstro-ogrske vojske na fronti in v domačih krajih (obsodbe deserterjev, nadzorovanje domačih in podobno).

Za tragično usodo prve srbske dobrovoljske divizije v Dobrudži vojaški zgodovinarji navajajo številni vzroke in okoliščine, in sicer:

- divizija ni bila homogena, saj so jo sestavljali pretežno nekdanji avstro-ogrski vojaki in preživeli višji častniki srbske vojske, pripeljani z otoka Krfa;
- vojaška sestava je bila sicer srbska (95 odstotkov), ni pa bila navajena na nesrbske podčastnike – narednike in kaplarje, predvsem na povelja in taktiliko nižjih enot;
- operativno je bila divizija del ruskega korpusa, ki pa je bil podrejen romunski armadi, zato ni bilo enotnih operativnih načrtov in taktičnih ciljev;
- povelja so v divizijo prihajala v treh jezikih – ruskem, romunskem in francoskem –, ki so jih višji srbski častniki sicer razumeli, večina nižjih častnikov in podčastnikov pa ni znala (razumela) srbsko, saj je bila navajena samo na nemška povelja in zanke;
- divizija je bila ustanovljena v Rusiji in poslana v boj v Romuniji, daleč od domovine, zato večina vojakov ni poznala pravega cilja boja;
- oboroženi so bili z neuporabnim trofejnim orožjem, pomanjkljivo opremljeni in velikokrat lačni;
- divizija ni imela niti svojega topništva niti konjenice, kar je precej zmanjševalo njeno manevrsko sposobnost in prožnost;

and intelligence of the Austro-Hungarian Army at the front itself and in the home towns (convictions of deserters, control of the locals and similar) were also reinforced.

Military historians list numerous reasons and circumstances for the tragic destiny of the 1st Serbian Volunteer Division, in particular:

- The composition of the division was not homogeneous, for it was composed mainly of former Austro-Hungarian soldiers and surviving senior officers of the Serbian Army, transported from the Island Krk.
- Although, the military formation was 95 percent Serbian it was unaccustomed to non-Serbian non-commissioned officers (sergeants and corporals), more precisely to commands and tactics of the lowest units.
- In the operational aspect, the division was a part of the Russian Corps, subjected to the Romanian Army due to which operational plans and tactical goals were not uniform.
- The division received commands in three different languages - Russian, Romanian and French, which Serbian officers understood, but most lower ranking officers and non-commissioned officers were only used to commands in German and could not understand nor speak Serbian.
- The division was founded in Russia and sent to fight Romania. Having been that far from homeland, most of the soldiers did not know what the actual objective of the combat was.
- The division was armed with "trophy" and useless weapons. It was insufficiently equipped and the troops were hungry most of the time.
- The division did not have its own artillery, nor a cavalry, which considerably diminished its manoeuvrability.
- The division was not trained nor prepared for combat on plains.

On the other hand, "the blood tax" of the 1st Serbian Volunteer Division was not in vain.

Its defeat against the Bulgarian Army was devastating for the latter, but in strategic terms, this was not evident before the Battle of Kajmakcalan.

The political significance of the joint battle performance of Serbs, Croats and Slovenians, not to mention the Czechs, has demonstrated to the super powers an unwavering will to liberate themselves of the Austro-Hungarian tutoring and to unite in a single state.

Slovenian military historians must have overlooked something vital: In 1916 in Dobrudja,

- pripadniki niso bili izurjeni niti pripravljeni za bojno delovanje na ravnici.

Po drugi strani pa krvni davek prve srbske dobrovoljske divizije ni bil zaman. Bolgarski armadi je prizadejala usoden poraz, ki je strateško prišel do izraza šele v boju za Kajmакčalan. Tudi politični pomen skupnega bojnega nastopa Srbov, Hrvatov in Slovencev, da ne omenjamamo še Čehov, je velesilam pokazal neomajno željo teh narodov, da se znebijo avstro-ogrskih nadoblasti in se združijo v samostojno državo.

Slovenski vojaški zgodovinarji pa so verjetno spregledali nekaj bistvenega: v Dobrudži so se leta 1916 slovenski vojaki, podčastniki in častniki prvič z orožjem uprli svojim stoltnim gospodarjem, avstro-ogrski državi. Tako bi tudi začetke slovenske vojske lahko premaknili iz leta 1918 (general Maister) v leto 1916, ko so se pripadniki homogenih slovenskih vojaških enot s svojimi poveljniki, sicer v okviru srbske dobrovoljske divizije, pogumno bojevali proti osovraženi avstro-ogrski monarhiji in umirali za temelje prihodnje državne skupnosti. Dokaz je število sodelujočih slovenskih dobrovoljcev v bojih v Dobrudži jeseni 1916, kot tudi sedem padlih. V dobrovoljskem polku v Sibiriji je bila leta 1916 vzpostavljena slovenska četa. Tudi na solunski fronti so bili slovenski dobrovoljci skupinsko razporejeni v posamezne enote. Največ (17) jih je bilo v 3. četi 1. bataljona 3. polka Moravske divizije. Poveljevala sta jim rezervni podporočnik Drago Urbič in narednik Josip Berin. Isto velja za 25 slovenskih dobrovoljcev Donavske divizije: vsi so bili razporejeni v 1. bataljon 8. polka.

Medtem ko se je prva srbska dobrovoljska divizija bojevala v Dobrudži, so začeli ustanavljati Srbski dobrovoljski korpus. Šlo je za izsiljeno akcijo Jugoslovanskega odbora, ki se mu je mudilo. Bližal se je namreč konec vojne, jugoslovanska ideja pa ni bila uresničena niti s številom dobrovoljcev niti z rezultati na bojnem polju. Korpus pod poveljstvom generala Mihajla Živkovića je bil ustanovljen 21. septembra 1916 samo iz poveljstva in nekaj štabnih enot.

Jugoslovanski odbor se je povsem napočno odzval na manjši odziv dobrovoljcev: odredil je prisilno mobilizacijo med avstro-ogrskimi vojaki – ruski ujetniki. Tako so v Odeso »pripeljali« 9.000 Hrvatov in 4.000 Slovencev, kar Slovenian soldiers, officers and non-commissioned officers withstood their century-long masters – the Austro-Hungarian state – for the first time. Thus the beginnings of the Slovenian Army could well be moved from 1918 (in 1918 General Maister assumed military command over the entire lower Štarjerska region) to 1916, when the members of the homogeneous Slovenian military units with their commanders, otherwise in the formation of the Serbian Volunteer Division, fought bravely against the hated Austro-Hungarian Monarchy and lost their lives for the foundations of a future national community. The Slovenian volunteers that participated in combats in Dobrudja in the autumn of 1916, as well as 7 volunteers that were killed in action serve as a proof that Slovenian Army existed before 1918. In 1916, a Slovenian company was formed within a volunteer regiment in Siberia. Slovenian volunteers were deployed to units at the Macedonian Front as well. Most volunteers (17) were in the 3rd company, 1st battalion, 3rd regiment of the Morava Division, commanded by the Second Lieutenant Drago Urbič and Sergeant Josip Berin. The same applies for 25 Slovenian volunteers in the Danube Division, all deployed to the 1st battalion of the 8th regiment.

At the time the 1st Serbian Volunteer Division “bled” in Dobrudja, the Serbian Volunteer Corps was established. This was a forced action of the Yugoslav Committee which was in a hurry, because the end of the war was approaching and the Yugoslav idea was not realised neither in the number of volunteers or results on the battlefield. The Corps was established on 21 September 1916 under the command of General Mihajl Živković. It was actually composed only of the Corps command and a few headquarter units.

The reaction of the Yugoslav Committee to the diminished response of the volunteers was completely inappropriate: it initiated a forcible mobilisation among the Austro-Hungarian Russian prisoners. Thus 9,000 Croats and 4,000 Slovenians were sent to Odessa, which caused resistance and the establishment of the dissident movement, both strongly supported by the Austro-Hungarian intelligence service. This in fact suppressed the volunteer movement. Around 45 percent of soldiers and officers abandoned the 2nd Serbian Volunteer Division alone, while approximately 40 percent abandoned the entire Serbian Volunteer Corps. In mid 1917, 3,787 Slovenian volunteers, among them 42 Slovenian officers, joined the dissidents. Because they did not care to whom they swore their military loyalty, the Serbian Army or the non-existent Yugoslavian Army, je povzročilo odpor in ustanovitev disident-skega gibanja z močno podporo avstro-ogrsko obveščevalne službe. To je razbilo dobrovoljsko gibanje. Samo 2. srbsko dobrovoljsko divizijo je zapustilo 45 odstotkov vojakov in častnikov, celoten srbski dobrovoljski korpus pa 40 odstotkov. Disidentom se je sredi leta 1917 pridružilo 3787 slovenskih dobrovoljcev, med njimi 42 slovenskih častnikov. Nekateri so se bojevali tudi na solunski fronti, saj jim je bilo vseeno, ali bodo prisegli vojaško zvestobo srbski vojski ali pa neobstoječi jugoslovanski. Nekaj imen je znanih in so navedena v abecednem seznamu.

Od aprila 1917 do maja 1918 so iz Rusije na solunsko fronto pripeljali 640 častnikov ter 12.500 podčastnikov, kaplarjev in vojakov – dobrovoljcev. Že prej, od junija 1916, je bilo v srbski vojski na solunski fronti 3.380 dobrovoljcev. Iz Severne in Južne Amerike je do aprila 1918 prišlo skupno 4.000 dobrovoljcev – izseljencev, iz Italije pa 300.

Po podatkih srbskega vojnega poveljstva je v preboju solunske fronte in osvoboditvi Srbije sodelovalo skupno 20.180 dobrovoljcev, med njimi 141 slovenskih.

Po podrobнем pregledu arhivskih dokumentov in seznama identificiranih slovenskih dobrovoljcev pa je mogoče sklepati, da je bilo teh več, saj jih je v preboju solunske fronte sodelovalo 194 (10 veteranov Dobrovoljskega odreda, 50 dobrovoljcev iz Srbskega dobrovoljskega korpusa iz Rusije, 45 dobrovoljcev iz Slovenije, 27 izseljencev iz ZDA, 55 iz Nocere Umbre in 7 iz Pivkovega bataljona).

Slovenski dobrovoljci v srbski vojski 1912–1918

Slovenski odpor proti avstro-ogrski monarhiji je bil v 19. stoletju organiziran in voden različno. Italijanske težnje po slovenskem etničnem ozemlju so ga ovirale, a hkrati krepile. V tem odporu so najglobljo sled v narodnem spominu zapustili slovenski književniki in dijaško-študentska mladina.

V sokolskih društvih, predvsem v Ljubljani, Mariboru in Gorici, so si mladi slovenski intelektualci pridobivali nacionalno zavest in se pripravljali na akcije za slabitev in rušenje avstro-ogrsko tiranije.

Mladi sokoli iz omenjenih društev so bili some also fought at the Macedonian Front. Certain names are known and hence listed in the alphabetical order at the end of article.

From April 1917 to May 1918 only 640 officers and 12,000 non-commissioned officers, corporals and soldiers (volunteers) were transferred to the Macedonian Front. Even before this time the volunteers were in the formation of the Serbian Army at the Macedonian Front, but from 1916 onwards there were approximately 3,380 volunteers in that army. By April 1918, there were around 4,000 volunteers, expatriates from North and the South America. Approximately 300 volunteers came from Italy.

According to the data of the Serbian War Command, 20,180 volunteers in total, 141 out of which were Slovenian volunteers, participated in the breakthrough of the Macedonian Front and the liberation of Serbia.

After a detailed inspection of the archival documents and the list of identified Slovenian volunteers, it is possible to claim that the number of Slovenian volunteers was far greater, for 194 Slovenian volunteers (10 veterans of the Volunteer Detachment, 50 volunteers in the Serbian Volunteer Corps from Russia, 45 volunteers from Slovenia, 27 expatriates from USA, 55 volunteers from Nocera Umbra and 7 volunteers from the Pivko's Battalion) participated in the breakthrough of the Macedonian Front.

Slovenian volunteers in the Serbian Army, 1912-1918

In the 19th century, the Slovenian resistance against the Austro-Hungarian Monarchy was organised and led in various ways. Italian desires for Slovenian ethnic territory only worsened. During the resistance, Slovenian writers and high-school and university students were the ones that left the deepest trace in the national memory.

The Sokol Organisations, mainly the associations in Ljubljana, Maribor in Gorica, were represented by schools in which young Slovenian intellectuals cultivated national consciousness and prepared themselves for actions intended to weaken and destroy the Austro-Hungarian tyranny.

The members of the Sokol Organisation, from the mentioned associations, were the first volunteers to join the Serbian Army. They were young men, inspired by national pride and above all well acquainted with the state of spirit in the Austro-Hungarian Monarchy as well as with the problems of Serbia and Montenegro in their sacred battle for the liberation from the Turkish yoke and tyranny.

prvi dobrovoljci v vrstah srbske vojske. To so bili mladenci, polni nacionalnega ponosa, predvsem pa dobro seznanjeni s stanjem duha v avstro-ogrski monarhiji, pa tudi s problemi Srbije in Črne gore v njunem boju za osvoboditev izpod turške tiranije.

Prav zaradi tega so avstro-ogrski policijski in drugi državni organi sumili, da so slovenski sokoli uporniška in prevratniška organizacija. Zato so kmalu razpustili vsa sokolska društva, del članov so poklicali v vojsko, manjši del pa osamili ali internirali v druge dele države. Vsi preostali člani so bili pod policijskim nadzorstvom.

Ljubljanski sokoli so imeli najbolj drzne poglede na demokratične pravice in svobodo vseh narodov v avstro-ogrski monarhiji. Zato ni čudno, da so prav njih kot članov avstro-ogrsko vojske v njej najbolj bali. Ko so prehajali med srbske dobrovoljce, so bili praviloma najbolje izurjeni vojaki, poleg tega pa izjemno požrtvovalni in pogumni borci. To dokazuje primer sokolskega društva Ljubljana – II, iz katerega je bilo celo deset članov med dobrovoljci v vrstah Jugoslovanske divizije, ki je na solunski fronti začela boj za uresničitev jugoslovanske ideje, torej ustavitev Jugoslavije.

Kot dobrovoljci so v začetku balkanske vojne leta 1912 v Srbijo prvi odšli mariborski sokoli, med njimi študent medicine Bruno Vajksl in zdravnik dr. Ivan Oražen. Kmalu se jima je pridružil dr. Mirko Černič, ki je delal kot zdravnik v Nišu. Član mariborske sokolske organizacije je bil tudi medicinec Adolf Kristl, ki je padel kot prvi slovenski dobrovoljec in zdravnik srbske vojske.

Iz Maribora izhaja tudi sokol dr. Ljudevit Pivko, ki se je v slovensko zgodovino zapisal kot borec proti avstro-ogrski monarhiji, ko je kot avstro-ogrski častnik na soški fronti prestopil na italijansko stran in organiziral jugoslovanski dobrovoljski bataljon, ki je štel 1.000 častnikov in vojakov. V njem je bilo tudi 130 Slovencev, med njimi 16 članov sokolske organizacije, tudi rez. poročnik Stane Vidmar.

Dezertiranje ali samovoljno zapuščanje avstro-ogrsko vojske je bilo zelo strogo kaznovano. Odhod na nasprotno stran oz. med dobrovoljce pa je bil veleizdaja, kaznovana s smrtno. Odgovornost za deserterstvo pa ni doletela samo tistih, ki so zapustili avstro-ogrsko vojsko, temveč vse člane družine, sorodstvo, pa tudi cele vasi, iz katerih so bili »veleizdajalci«.

Avgust Jenko (1894, Ljubljana–1914, Cer), ustanovitelj »Preporoda«, prve revolucionarne in tajne dijaške organizacije v Sloveniji, 1912

Avgust Jenko (1894, Ljubljana–1914. Cer), Founder of the movement »Preporoda« (Rebirth), the first revolutionary and secret student organisation in Slovenia, 1912

Due to the latter, the Austro-Hungarian national and police authorities suspected that the Slovenian Sokol Organisation was a resistant and revolutionary organisation. All Sokol associations were dissolved. A part of their members were drafted to the army, while a smaller part was isolated or interned in other parts of the country. All other members were under police supervision.

It is a historical fact that the Ljubljana Sokol Organisation members were those who expressed the boldest views on democratic rights and the liberty of all nations in the Austro-Hungarian Monarchy. It is therefore not surprising that the Ljubljana Sokol Organisation presented that part of the Austro-Hungarian Army that was feared the most by that same army. As they joined the Serbian volunteers they were believed to have been the most trained soldiers and, at the same time, the most self-sacrificing and courageous fighters. The example of the Ljubljana Sokol Organisation is the proof; as many as ten members became volunteers in the Yugoslavian Division, which initiated a fight at the Macedonian Front with the intent to realise the establishment of Yugoslavia.

At the beginning of the Balkan War, in 1912, the Maribor Sokol Organisation members were the first to leave for Serbia as volunteers. Bruno Vajksl, a medical student and dr. Ivan Oražen, a doctor were among them. Soon after, Dr. Mirko Černič, who worked as a doctor in Niš, joined them. Medical Znani so številni primeri sodnega preganjanja in izrečenih smrtnih kazni, pa tudi likvidacij, internacij in policijskega nadzora. Najbolj znan je smrtna obsodba Škofjeločana Ivana Gosarja, inženirja, sicer pa sokola in poročnika srbske vojske, leta 1917 v Beogradu.

Prestop med dobrovoljce je bil zaradi navezenega zelo drzno, pogumno in tudi patriotско dejanje. Posamezniki so, da bi zavarovali svoje najbližje in sorodnike, celo menjali imena. Tako je mlada Mariborčanka Antonija Javornik postala Natalija Bjelajac, sicer pa prva in najbolj pogumna slovenska prostovoljka v srbski vojski z 12 ranami in prav toliko visokimi odlikovanji. Umrla je v Beogradu, kjer je tudi pokopana, kot narednica srbske vojske.

Dobrovoljci so bili več kot klasični junaki neke vojne, saj jih je poleg poguma gnala zavest, da ima njihovo dejanje tudi ogromen nacionalni pomen.

Slovenski dobrovoljci v balkanskih vojnah 1912–1913

V prvi balkanski vojni 1912–1913 so bili med prvimi slovenskimi dobrovoljci srbske vojske zdravniki, ki so iz humanitarnih in solidarnostnih razlogov pohiteli v Srbijo, Črno goro in Bolgarijo. Bilo jih je 24, od teh 19 rez. častnikov (17 zdravnikov in 2 medicinca), podčastnica in štirje vojaki.

Zdravniško in medicinsko pomoč je organiziral poseben odbor Rdečega križa, ki je bil prav za te namene ustanovljen v Ljubljani.

V prvem delu so kot dobrovoljci v srbsko vojsko odšli slovenski zdravniki: dr. Ivan Oražen, prof. dr. Edo Šlajmer, dr. Edo Krajec, dr. Fedrapsperg in dr. E. F. Šabec. V Črno goro pa sta istočasno odšla zdravnika dr. Josip Stojc in dr. Josip Tičar.

V drugem delu je novembra 1912 odšel v Beograd dr. Gaber Hočevar, ki je najprej postal član sanitetnega oddelka srbskega vojnega ministrstva, nato pa je odšel v Bolgarijo, kjer je v Bratini pri Sofiji organiziral vojaško poljsko bolnišnico za 300 ranjencev.

Z zdravniki sta kot dobrovoljca odšla v Srbijo in vstopila v srbsko vojsko Ivan Furlanič, pravnik iz Kopra in član uredništva časopisa Slovenski Jug, ter dr. Gašper Pekle, pravnik – odvetnik iz Ljubljane in član uredništva časopisa Slovenski Jug. Miha Čop iz Ljubljane pa se je podal v Črno goro, kjer se je od leta 1912 student, Adolf Kristl, who was the first Slovenian volunteer and a doctor of the Serbian Army, to be killed in action, was also a member of the Maribor Sokol Organisation.

Dr. Ljudevit Pivko, a Sokol Organisation member also came from Maribor. He went down in Slovenian history as a fighter against the Austro-Hungarian Monarchy, when he joined the Italian side at the Isonzo Front as an Austro-Hungarian officer and organised a Yugoslavian Volunteer Battalion, which comprised approximately 1,000 officers and soldiers. In that same battalion, there were 130 Slovenians, 16 of which were members of the Sokol Organisation. Reserve Lieutenant Stane Vidmar was one of them.

Desertion or an arbitrary abandonment of the Austro-Hungarian Army was severely punished. The decision to join the opposite side or the volunteers was considered as high treason, punished by death. Not only were those who left the Austro-Hungarian Army considered traitors, but all members of their immediate and wider family and the inhabitants of their entire village were held accountable for desertment. There are many examples of prosecution and sentences of death as well as executions, imprisonments and police surveillance known to the public. The most known example is the declaration of death sentence given to engineer Ivan Gosar in Beograd in 1917, who was a Lieutenant of the Serbian Army, a Sokol Organisation member and an inhabitant of Škofja Loka.

Considering the above mentioned, entry to the volunteers was a bold, brave and a patriotic act. With intent to protect their relatives or those close to, some have even changed their names. Hence a young woman from Maribor, Antonija Javornik, changed her name to Natalija Bjelajac. She was the first and bravest volunteer in the Serbian Army. She suffered 12 wounds and received 12 prestigious awards. She died in Beograd, where she was buried as Sergeant of the Serbian Army.

The volunteers were not classic war heroes. They were more than heroes, for they possessed not only personal courage, but were conscious of the importance of their acts from a folk and national prospective.

Slovenian volunteers in the Balkan Wars, 1912–1913

During the First Balkan War the first Slovenian volunteers in the Serbian Army were doctors who rushed to Serbia, Montenegro and Bulgaria for humanitarian reasons. There were 24 of them, out of bojeval v Prvem samostojnem dobrovoljskem bataljonu črnogorske vojske.

Kot prvi aktivni častnik avstro-ogrške vojske je dezertiral in prestopil v srbsko vojsko poročnik Martin Javornik iz Maribora, nazadnje v službi v Bosni in Hercegovini. V obeh balkanskih vojnah je sodeloval kot aktivni kapetan srbske vojske. Kot pogumni poveljnik čete je padel avgusta 1914, v začetku cerske bitke.

Njegovemu vzgledu je sledila nečakinja, mariborska gimnazijka Antonija Javornik, ki je izsilila sprejetje med dobrovoljce srbske vojske. Sodelovala je v obeh balkanskih in prvi svetovni vojni. Da bi zavarovala svoje sorodnike v Mariboru, si je nadela ime Natalija Bjelajac. Bila je borka in bolničarka v tragičnem umiku srbske vojske čez Albanijo in v zmago-vitem preboju solunske fronte. Dvanajstkrat je bila ranjena, dobila je prav toliko odlikovanj, tudi najvišje srbsko – Karađorđeve zvezdo z meči. Umrla je skoraj pozabljena v Beogradu. Na spomeniku piše samo: Tukaj počiva Natalija Bjelajac, narednica srbske vojske.

Ob njenem primeru sem se zavedel, da bo treba organizirati ureditev in zavarovanje vojaških grobov, grobnic in delov pokopališč, kjer počivajo slovenski dobrovoljci srbske vojske, kakor tudi slovenski partizani, ki so se bojevali in padli v Srbiji od leta 1941 do 1945.

To je najmanj, kar lahko stori država.

Srbski dolg slovenskim dobrovoljcem pa je veliko večji. Delno je sicer bil povrnjen z velikodušnim sprejemom slovenskih izgnancev leta 1941, pa tudi z žrtvami srbskih partizanov v zadnjih bojih za osvoboditev Jugoslavije.

Ohraniti pa je treba trajen spomin na slovenske dobrovoljce, saj so prav oni prvi pohiteli na pomoč srbski vojski in narodu v najtežjih trenutkih njune zgodovine.

Slovenski dobrovoljci v srbski vojski 1914–1918

Obravnavo teme o slovenskih dobrovoljcih v srbski vojski v letih 1914–1918 sem metodo-loško razdelil na obdobja, najbolj značilna za splošne vojaško-politične razmere. Poleg tega gre za obdobja, v katerih so se posamezniki najbolj identificirali ali pa so si jih zapomnili kot takšne (npr. sodelovanje v cerski bitki, tragične usode umika čez Albanijo, ruska which 19 were reserve officers (17 doctors and 2 medical students), one a female non-commissioned officer and 4 soldiers.

A special Red Cross committee, which was founded in Ljubljana for that same purpose, organised the health and medical care.

During the first phase, the following Slovenian doctors joined the Serbian Army as volunteers: Dr. Ivan Oražen, Edo Šlajmer, Professor Dr. Edo Krajec, Dr. Fedransperg and Dr. E. F. Šabec. Doctors of medicine Dr. Josip Stojc and Dr. Josip Tičar headed to Montenegro at the same time.

In the second phase, in November 1912, Dr. Gaber Hočevar went to Beograd. He first became a member of the medical department at the Serbian War Ministry and then went to Bulgaria where he organised a military field hospital for 300 wounded in Bratina, near Sofia.

Together with doctors the following individuals rushed to Serbia and joined the Serbian Army as volunteers: Ivan Furlanič, a lawyer from Koper and a member of the Slovenski Jug (Slovenian South) newspaper editorial office, Dr. Gašper Pekle, attorney-at-law from Ljubljana and a member of the Slovenski Jug (Slovenian South) newspaper editorial office. Miha Čop from Ljubljana went to Montenegro where he fought in the first independent Volunteer Battalion of the Army of Montenegro in 1912.

As a first active member of the Austro-Hungarian Army, Lieutenant Martin Javornik from Maribor, who had been last in service in Bosnia and Herzegovina, deserted and joined the Serbian Army. As an active Captain of the Serbian Army he participated in both Balkan Wars. When he fell bravely in August 1914, at the beginning of the Battle of Cer, he was a Company Commander.

His niece, a young high-school student from Maribor, Antonija Javornik, followed his example, and joined the Serbian volunteers. She participated in both Balkan Wars and in the First World War. In order to protect her family in Maribor, she changed her name into Natalija Bjelajac. As a fighter and as a nurse she participated in the tragic retreat of the Serbian Army across Albania and in the victorious breakthrough of the Macedonian Front. She was wounded 12 times and received as many awards; of course she also received the highest Serbian military award – the Karađorđe's Star with Swords. She died, almost forgotten, in Beograd. The only thing written on her gravestone is: Here lies Natalija Bjelajac, Sergeant of the Serbian Army.

Thinking of her example I have come to realize that the arrangement and protection of military

- sodelovanje slovenskih dobrovoljcev srbske vojske v bojih za Koroško 1918–1919.

Identifikacijske in druge podrobnejše podatke lahko tisti, ki jih to zanima, poiščejo v prilogi – abecednem seznamu vseh identificiranih slovenskih dobrovoljcev v srbski vojski, ki jih je bilo 567, mogoče celo več.

graves, tombs and cemeteries, where lie the Slovenian volunteers in the Serbian Army as well as Slovenian partisans, who fought and fell in Serbia between 1914 – 1945, would have to be organised.

This is the least that a country can do.

Of course, Serbian debt to Slovenian volunteers is far greater. It was indeed partly paid back by a hospitable reception of Slovenian expatriates in 1941, as well as with the victims of the Serbian partisans in the final battles for the liberation of Yugoslavia.

However, we must preserve a lasting memory of Slovenian volunteers, for it was them who were the first to help the Serbian Army and the Serbian nation in the most difficult times in their history.

Slovenian volunteers in the Serbian Army, 1914–1918

Slovenian volunteers in the Serbian Army from 1914 to 1918 were methodologically divided into periods that were most characteristic of the then overall military and political situation. These were, at the same time, periods with which individuals identified themselves the most or which were remembered the most (e.g. participation in the Battle of Cer, tragic destinies of the retreat across Albania, Russian prisoner camps and canvassing for recruitment to the Serbian volunteers, travel across Siberia and a boat voyage from Vladivostok to Dubrovnik, the breakthrough of the Macedonian Front and similar).

The periods are as follows:

- Successful defence of the Serbian Army (the Battle of Cer and the Battle of Kolubara), 1914–1915.

Slovenski dobrovoljci v srbski vojski 1914–1915

Slovenski dobrovoljci iz balkanskih vojn, ki so ostali v srbski vojski ali pa v Srbiji, so bili tudi prvi dobrovoljci, ki so ob ultimativnem napadu Avstro-Ogrske na izmučeno Srbijo vnovič priskočili na pomoč bratskemu narodu. Od že omenjenih 17 dobrovoljcev je to storil kapetan srbske vojske Martin Javornik, ki je za svobodo Srbije padel kot poveljnik čete na pobočju Cer. Njegova nečakinja Antonija, tedaj že prekaljena borka Natalija Bjelajac, je uživala velike simpatije srbskih vojakov, saj je pri njih veljalo, da dekleta lahko sicer skrbijo samo za celjenje ran in prinašanje vode, kot je to počela znana kosovska devojka ... Da pa bi nosila puško in jurišala na sovražnika – tega srbski vojaki niso mogli razumeti. Pravili so ji tudi »vražja Slovenka«, kar je pomenilo večje priznanje kot vseh njenih dvanajst odlikovanj po prav toliko ranah.

V Srbijo so prihiteli tudi številni slovenski zdravniki, predvsem sokoli in preporodovci pa so dali zgled, da je treba za ideje včasih žrtvovati tudi življenje. V mislih imam mladega Avgusta Jenka, ustanovitelja in vodjo tajne revolucionarne dijaške organizacije Preporod, ki si je prizadevala za ustanovitev jugoslovanske države ob pomoči Srbije, jugoslovenskega Piemonta. S to mislio se je vodja slovenskih preporodovcev znašel v vojnem metežu na pobočju cerske planine in omahnil pod streli sovražnika. Sledili so mu številni preporodovci.

Večina slovenskih dobrovoljcev je bila sprejeta v t. i. četniške odrede, od katerih sta bila najbolj znana Jadarski in Zlatiborski. Pripadnost četniškemu odredu je bila posebna čast za vsakega Srba, pa tudi za slovenske dobrovoljce, ki so veljali za zelo vzdržljive, premetene in pogumne borce. Srbi so leta 1941 prisrčno sprejeli slovenske izgnance, saj so s tem vračali dolg iz leta 1914. Razpredali so tudi mite o slovenskih četnikih.

Če prištejemo kapetana Martina Javornika in njegovo nečakinjo Antonijo s psevdonimom Natalija Bjelajac, je bilo v obdobju 1914–1915 v srbski vojski skupno 24 dobrovoljcev (4 častniki, podčastnica in 19 vojakov), in sicer:

Viktor Deisinger, Vladislav Fabijančič, Ivan Gosar, Antonija Javornik – Natalija Bjelajac, Martin Javornik, Vitomir Jelenc – Fedor, Avgust Jenko, Josip Jeras, Jurij Jerin,

- Predominance of the Austrian and the German Army – retreat of the Serbian Army across Albania to the island Krf, 1915–1916.

- Establishment of the Matija Gubec Yugoslavian Volunteer Regiment in Tomsk, Russia and return to the homeland, 1916–1920.
- Establishment of Captain Pivko's Yugoslavian Volunteer Battalion in Italy in 1918 and return to the homeland.
- Establishment of the Yugoslavian Volunteer Division in the Italian prisoner camp Nocera Umbra, Italy, 1918, and transfer to the Macedonian Front.

For those interested, the references and more detailed information can be found in the Appendix – an alphabetical list of all identified Slovenian volunteers in the Serbian Army; there were 567 of them, perhaps even more.

Slovenian volunteers in the Serbian Army, 1914–1915

Slovenian Volunteers from the Balkan Wars, who remained in the Serbian Army or who remained in Serbia, were also the first volunteers to once again render assistance to the brother nation, after Austria-Hungary's attack on the exhausted Serbia. Serbian Army Captain, Javornik Martin, who sacrificed his life for Serbia's freedom as a Company Commander on the slope of the Cer Mountain, was one of the previously mentioned 17 volunteers. His niece Antonija – Natalija Bjelajac, already a cunning fighter, was highly esteemed by the Serbian soldiers, for they had believed that girls could only take care of the wounded and bring water, as did the famous Kosovo Maiden (Kosovska devojka). But what Serbian soldiers could not understand is that a girl could carry a rifle and assault the enemy. She was called the "devil Slovenian" which meant more than all her twelve awards and as many wounds.

Many Slovenian doctors also rushed to Serbia. But it was mainly the Preporod Movement and the Sokol Organisation members who set an example by Lovro Klemenčič, Ernest Krulej, Štefan Levišnik, Anton Lušin, Drago Marušič, Mihelj, Vladimir Miselj, Radešček, Rado Rožaj, Adam Sardoč, Smrekar (z družino), Tomo Šorli, Stanko Šorn, Anton Zupanič in Mate Zupanič.

Slovenski dobrovoljci v srbski vojski po umiku čez Albanijo na Krf 1915–1916

Umik srbske vojske čez Albanijo na Krf je bil neizmerna golgota vojske in naroda ter izjemna epopeja fizične vzdržljivosti in moralne moči srbskega vojaka, torej tudi slovenskih dobrovoljcev. Premoč sovražnika je bila prevelika, da bi napade vzdržala še tako pogumna vojska. Zato je srbsko državno vodstvo in vojaško poveljstvo s težkim srcem odločilo, da to etapo bojevanja končajo z umikom čez neprehodno in sovražno Albanijo, da ohranijo življenja številnih vojakov, si ob zavezniški podpori odpočijejo na Krfu in potem znova udarijo po sovražniku.

Od 560.000 je na Krf do februarja 1916 prišpelo 170.000 fizično izmučenih, vendar moralno neomajnih srbskih vojakov, ki so trdno verjeli, da se bodo vrnili in osvobodili Srbijo. Za zgled so jim bili regent Aleksander in vsi častniki. Sledila je obsežna reorganizacija srbske vojske. Kmalu je 150.000 srbskih vojakov, razporejenih v tri armade, odšlo na solunsko fronto. Bližal se je odločilni trenutek srbske osvobodilne vojne – preboj solunske fronte.

Aprila 1916 so bili tudi vsi dobrovoljci razporejeni v poseben Dobrovoljski odred in premeščeni po četah v okolico Soluna. Poveljnik odreda je postal Slovencem znan in naklonjen četniški poveljnik Vojin Popović – vojvoda Vuk. Dobrovoljski odred je bil sestavljen iz treh bataljonov in posebnega bataljona srbskih dobrovoljcev ter neposredno podrejen srbskemu vrhovnemu poveljstvu.

Od slovenskih dobrovoljcev, ki so se prebili čez Albanijo na Krf, je srbsko vrhovno poveljstvo sedmerico (Kruej, Levišnik, Marušič, Mihelj, Miselj, Radešček in Šorli) napotilo v Rusijo agitirat za novovzpostavljenе dobrovoljske enote, deseterico pa vključilo v Odred. To so bili: Vladislav Fabijančič, Antonija Javornik – Natalija Bjelajac, Vitomir Jelenc – Fedor, Josip Jeras, Jurij Jerin (padel), Anton Lušin, Lovro Klemenčič, Rado Rožaj (padel), Stanko Šorn (padel) in Mate Zupanič.

Reorganizacija srbske vojske je bila končana demonstrating that sometimes lives had to be sacrificed for ideals. We refer to the young Avgust Jenk, founder and leader of the secret revolutionary high-school students' organisation Preporod (revival), who fought for the establishment of the Yugoslavian state; naturally with the help of Serbia, the Yugoslavia's Piedmont. With this thought in mind, the leader of the Slovenian members of the Preporod Movement found himself in war on the slope of the Cer Mountain and fell under hostile fire; many other members of the Preporod movement followed his courageous act.

Most Slovenian volunteers were admitted to so-called "chetnik detachments", the most famous of which were the Adriatic and Zlatibor chetnik detachments. It was an honour for every Serb and Slovenian volunteer, which were considered to be extremely persistent, intelligent and courageous fighters, to be a member of the chetnik detachment. We should remember that in 1941 the Serbs warmly welcomed the Slovenian expatriates, and thus repaid their debt from 1914. Naturally the myths of Slovenian chetniks went on.

If we count in Captain Martin Javornik and his niece Antonija, under the pseudonym Natalija Bjelajac, there were 24 volunteers altogether (4 officers, a female non-commissioned officer and 19 soldiers) in the Serbian Army between 1914 and 1915.

Deisinger Viktor, Fabijančič Vladislav, Gosar Ivan, Javornik Antonija – Bjelajac Natalija, Javornik Martin, Jelenc Vitomir – Fedor, Jenko Avgust, Jeras Josip, Jerin Jurij, Klemenčič Lovro, Kruej Ernest, Levišnik Štefan, Lušin Anton, Marušič Drago, Mihelj, Miselj Vladimir, Radešček, Rožaj Rado, Sardoč Adam, Smrekar (with family), Šorli Tomo, Šorn Stanko, Zupanič Anton and Zupanič Mate.

Slovenian volunteers in the Serbian Army after the retreat across Albania to the Island Krf, 1915–1916

The retreat of the Serbian Army across Albania to the island Krf was devastating for the army and the nation and a unique epic of physical endurance and moral power of the Serbian soldier and the Slovenian volunteers. The supremacy of the enemy was too great for any courageous army to be able to sustain an attack. Therefore, the Serbian national leadership and Military Command decided with a heavy heart to finish this phase of fighting by retreating across the impassable and hostile Albania with the desire to preserve as many soldier lives and to, supported by the Allied forces, rest on the island Krf and later again attack the hated enemy.

Out of 560,000 only 170,000 physically exhausted, maja 1916 in posamezni deli so takoj nadaljevali bojne naloge. Tako je Dobrovoljski odred napadal v smeri Korča–Lerin, bataljon srbskih dobrovoljcev pa od Ohrida proti Resnu.

Srbska vojska je od junija do avgusta 1916 zavzela začetne bojne položaje na solunski fronti proti dobro utrjeni bulgarski armadi. Mogočno gorovje Kajmakčalan (2525 m) je bilo osrednja taktična in strateška točka, ki je odločala o bojnem uspehu. Bulgari so ga solidno utrdili in branili ne oziraje se na žrtve.

Tudi Srbi so vedeli, da sta uspeh v vojni in njihova usoda odvisna od osvojitve Kajmakčalana. Zato je srbsko vrhovno poveljstvo za odločilni napad na to goro smrtni določilo svojo najboljšo divizijo, Drinsko. Napad se je začel 12. septembra, 18. september je bil odločilen in najbolj krvav dan te slavne srbske divizije. V silovitem bližinskem boju na nož so pogumni Drinci z jurišem pregnali že utrujene bulgarske vojake. Toda dan pozneje so Bulgari z nenadnim in množičnim protinapadom osvojili vrh Kajmakčalana, ga dodatno utrdili in pojmenovali po svojem kralju, Borisovu trdnjavi.

V takšnem taktično-operativnem položaju je srbsko vrhovno poveljstvo okrepilo Drinsko divizijo z Dobrovoljskim odredom. Po skrbno pripravljenem in silovitem napadu sta 30. septembra 1916 skupaj vnovič osvojila vrh Kajmakčalana, nato pa nadaljevala bojni pohod proti Bitolju in Strakovem grobu.

Srbske izgube so bile velike. Tudi Dobrovoljski odred je bil zdesetkan. Padel je tudi njihov poveljnik vojvoda Vuk. Od slovenskih dobrovoljcev so na Kajmakčalanu padli Juraj Jerin, Stanko Šorn in Rado Rožaj.

Slovenski dobrovoljci v srbskem dobrovoljskem korpusu v Rusiji (1916–1917)

Po sporazumu in predhodnem dogovoru med ruskim in srbskim vrhovnim vojaškim poveljstvom so v začetku leta 1916 visoki častniki, predstavniki srbske vojske načrtno obiskovali ruska ujetniška taborišča in nagovarjali ujete pripadnike avstro-ogrsko vojske – Srbe, Hrvate in Slovence –, naj se kot dobrovoljci priključijo srbski vojski. Ta se je skupaj z zahodnimi zavezniki pripravljala na ofenzivo na solunski fronti. Pridobili so skoraj vse Srbe, Hrvatov in Slovencem pa so zagotavljali, da se bodo le kot dobrovoljci srbske vojske lahko bojevali za svobodo svoje domovine v okvirih skupne jugoslovanske države – kraljevine Jugoslavije.

but morally unshakeable Serbian soldiers, who firmly believed that they would return and liberate Serbia, arrived on the island Krk in February 1916. Regent Alexander and all other officers set an example. What followed was a comprehensive reorganisation of the entire Serbian Army. Soon afterwards, 150,000 Serbian soldiers, divided into three armies, took off for the Macedonian Front. The decisive moment of the Serbian army was approaching – the breakthrough of the Macedonian Front.

All volunteers, in April 1916 already, had been deployed to the special volunteer detachment and transferred to companies in the surroundings of Thessaloniki. The chetnik Commander Vojin Popović – Duke Vuk, whom Slovenians knew, and who was fond of the Slovenian nation, was appointed commander of the detachment. The volunteer detachment was composed of three battalions and a special battalion comprising Serbian volunteers. The detachment was immediately subordinate to the Serbian Supreme Command.

Out of those Slovenian volunteers that managed to get to the island Krk across Albania, seven of them (Krusej, Levišnik, Marušič, Mihelj, Miselj, Radešček and Šorli) were sent to Russia by the Serbian Supreme Command because of the agitation of the newly formed volunteer unit, while ten of them were included into the Detachment. They were:

Fabijančič Vladislav, Javornik Antonija – Bjelajac Natalija, Jelenc Vitomir – Fedor, Jeras Josip, Jerin Jurij (killed in action), Lušin Anton, Klemenčič Lovro, Rožaj Rado (killed in action), Šorn Stanko (killed in action) and Zupanič Mate.

The reorganisation of the Serbian Army was accomplished already in May 1916, after which individual units immediately engaged in battles. Thus the Volunteer Detachment attacked in the direction of Korč – Lerin, while the Serbian Volunteer Battalion attacked all the way between Ohrid and Resen.

The Serbian Army had been occupying initial battle positions at the Macedonian Front from June to August 1916, with the intent to withstand the well fortified Bulgarian Army. The strong Kajmakcalan Mountain (2525m) presented a focal tactical and strategic point, which was decisive of the success of this battle. The Bulgarians strongly fortified and defended the Kajmakcalan Mountain paying no regard to the victims.

Serians also knew that the outcome of war and their destiny depends on the conquest of the Kajmakcalan Mountain. Therefore the Serbian Supreme Command chose its best division – the V teh propagandnih dejavnostih je sodelovalo tudi sedem slovenskih dobrovoljcev srbske vojske, ki so se leta 1915 uspeli umakniti na Krf. Akcijo je usklajeval Jugoslovanski odbor, v katerem je bilo tudi nekaj slovenskih politikov. Zbiranje slovenskih dobrovoljcev v ruskih ujetniških taboriščih so pospeševali pripadniki sokolske organizacije, pa tudi številni preporodovci. Zgledovali so se po poljskih in čeških ujetnikih, ki so prav v Rusiji prvi ustavljali številne dobrovoljske legije.

Prva srbska dobrovoljska divizija je bila ustanovljena 29. aprila 1916 v Odesi, njen poveljnik je postal polkovnik Stevan Hadžić, pozneje armadni general.

Ker je bilo v obdobju 1917/1918 v Rusiji dvo-vladje (začetek oktobrske revolucije in posredovanje evropskih držav ob pomoči protirevolucionarjev – belogardistov), sta si obe strani prizadevali različne dobrovoljske enote pritegniti vsaka na svojo stran. Včasih so to pogojevali celo z dovoljenjem za prost odhod v domovino. S pravilno presojo razmer in spretnostjo poveljujočih častnikov, tudi slovenskega (kapetana Jožeta Šircelja, poveljnika dobrovoljskega Jugoslovanskega polka Matije Gubca v Sibiriji), so dobrovoljske enote premeščali na solunsko fronto.

V nadaljevanju podajam pregled slovenskih dobrovoljcev po enotah oz. dogajanjih, ker jih bodo zainteresirani lažje našli, podrobnejši podatki pa so na voljo v prilogi, v abecednem seznamu vseh identificiranih slovenskih dobrovoljcev.

Drina Division for the crucial assault on the “mountain of death”. The attack started on 12 September. This decisive as well as bloodiest day, of this famous Serbian Division, was the 18 September. In the fierce close combat the courageous members of the Drina Division assaulted and drove away the already tired Bulgarian soldiers. Nonetheless, the Bulgarians conquered the Kajmakcalan Mountain summit the next day in a sudden massive counterattack. They enhanced its fortification and named it Boris's Fort after their King Boris.

In such a tactic-operational situation, the Serbian Supreme Command strengthened the Drina Division with the Volunteer Detachment. On 30 September 1916, after the carefully prepared and fierce attack the Drina Division, assisted by the Volunteer Detachment, once again conquered the Kajmakcalan Mountain summit and later continued its battle activities in the direction of Bitola and Strakov grob.

Serbian losses were immense. The Volunteer Detachment had likewise been decimated. Their commander, Duke Vuk, had courageously died in action. The following Slovenian volunteers were killed in action on the Kajmakcalan Mountain: Jerin Juraj, Šorn Stanko and Rožaj Rado.

Slovenian volunteers in the Serbian Volunteer Corps in Russia, 1916-1917

In the beginning of 1916, after a concluded agreement and a prior arrangement between the Russian and Serbian military commands, the high officers, representatives of the Serbian Army, intentionally visited Russian prisoner camps and through various means tried to persuade the captured members of the Austro-Hungarian Army – the Serbs, Croats and Slovenians to join the Serbian Army as volunteers, which, together with the Western allies, had already been preparing for a fierce offensive at the Macedonian Front. They won almost all Serbs to their side. Croats and Slovenians on the other hand, were told that only as volunteers in the Serbian Army would they be able to fight for the freedom of their countries in the form of the yet-to-be established Yugoslavian state (Kingdom of Yugoslavia).

Seven Slovenian volunteers in the Serbian Army, that managed to retreat to the island Krf in 1915, also participated in these propaganda actions. The entire action had been coordinated by the Yugoslav Committee in which there were also Slovenian politicians. Inside the Russian prisoner camps, the collecting of Slovenian volunteers had been promoted by the members of the Sokol Organisation, as well as numerous members of the Preporod Movement. They followed the example of the Polish and the Czech prisoners who had been the first to establish numerous volunteer legions in Russia.

The first Slovenian Volunteer Division was founded on 29 April 1916, in Odessa. Colonel Stevan Hadžić, who later became an Army General, was appointed as its commander.

Between 1917 and 1918 there was a two-government regime in Russia (one at the beginning of the October Revolution and the second, the intervention of European countries with the help of antirevolutionaries – the White Guards), for which reason both sides endeavoured to attract different volunteer units to their side. Sometimes these volunteers were given permission to freely leave for their homeland. Due to the appropriate estimation of the situation and the competency of the commanding officers, including Slovenians (Captain Jože Šircelj, Commander of the Matija Gubec Yugoslavian Regiment in Siberia), the volunteer units transferred to the Macedonian Front.

Next is an overview of Slovenian volunteers by unit or by activity, as those interested, will be able to identify them easier. More detailed information is available in the Appendix – Slovenian Volunteers in Alphabetical Order.

Srbski dobrovoljski korpus

Pripadniki Srbskega dobrovoljskega korpusa 1916–1917 v Odesi, Rusija (46, tudi 47): Borštnik, Franjo Budinek, Čehovin, Ivan Črček, Ferdo Ferluga, Viktor Fettich, Franc Gabršek, Ivan Gmajnar, Andrej Golob, Franc Grablevec, Franc Grebenc, Peter Grgec, Anton Gunde, Andrej Habe, Matko Heric, Vekoslav Heric, Jožef Kalan, Matija Kastelic, Kavčič – Habe, Leon Kavčnik, Josip Kerin, Ferdinand Kobi, Maks Kobler, Kobler, brat Vladimira, Ferdo Kokot, Maks Koprivnjak, Jože Kostelič, Janez Kovač, Anton Kovačič, Juš Kozak, Jaka Koželj, Ernest Krulej, Anton Kržič, Ferdo Kunej, Rado Lenard, Anton Leskovec, Tone Lovrič, Josip Modic, Osana, Rajko Paulin, Pečan, Karel Piškur, Anton Rode, Rustja, Edvard Šajn, Franc Štrekelj in Julij Zetner.

Vsi navedeni pripadniki Srbskega dobrovoljskega korpusa (47) so bili razporejeni v eno od dveh dobrovoljskih divizij. Ker pa ob njihovih podatkih ni bilo oznake določene divizije (1. ali 2. dobrovoljske), smo jih uradno uvrstili pod »Srbski dobrovoljski korpus«, pod katerega poveljstvo sta sodili obe diviziji. Iz zbranih podatkov je razvidno, da je bilo v Rusiji 249 slovenskih dobrovoljev, ki so bili razporejeni v teh enotah:

- 1. srbska dobrovoljska divizija: 149,
- 2. srbska dobrovoljska divizija: 14,
- Srbski dobrovoljski korpus: 47 in
- Jugoslovanski dobrovoljski polk Matije Gubca: 39.

Od teh 249 je prišlo na solunsko fronto samo 50 slovenskih dobrovoljev ali 20 odstotkov. Vzroki za tolikšen osip so bili velike izgube v Dobrudži, disidentsko gibanje in splošne razmere v Rusiji, posebej v obdobju premeščanja na solunsko fronto. Jugoslovanski dobrovoljski polk Matije Gubca je potoval v domovino po 4.000 km dolgi sibirski železnici, v hudi zimi. Čakala ga je tudi večmesečna plovba po Tihem in Indijskem oceanu ter Sredozemskem morju. Domov so se vrnili šele dve leti po končani vojni, 1920.

Members of the Additional Battalion of the 1st Serbian Volunteer Division, June 1917 in Odessa (20): Božič Ivan, Burja Mirko, Durini Viktor, Eržen Tone, Ferluga Ferdo, Gorečan Franjo, Grahli Vladimir, Habe Tone, Janžekovič Vekoslav, Klemenc Milan, Kobler Franc, Kump Marjan, Kuster Avgust, Lapajne Stanko, Ogorevec Ivan, Perhavec Jakob, Poberaj Valentin, Šašelj Gregor, Zorc Janez and Zupan Ivan.

The 2nd Serbian Volunteer Division

Members of the 2nd Serbian Volunteer Division in the autumn of 1917 in Odessa (14):

Aljančič Ernest, Avšič Rado, Cener Vekoslav, Juhart Albin, Kreačič Franjo, Krže Vinko, Kumelj Ciril, Pelan Stanko, Perič Franjo, Prinčič Edvard, Rom Vinko, Skvrača Ivan, Solberger Adolf and Zaplotnik Rado.

Serbian Volunteer Corps

Members of the Serbian Volunteer Corps, 1916–1917 in Odessa, a former part of Russia (46, also 47):

Borštnik, Budinek Franjo, Čehovin, Črček Ivan, Ferluga Ferdo, Fettich Viktor, Gabršek Franc, Gmajnar Ivan, Golob Andrej, Grablevec Franc, Grebenc Franc, Grgec Peter, Gunde Anton, Habe Andrej, Heric Matko, Heric Vekoslav, Kalan Jožef, Kastelic Matija, Kavčič – Habe, Kavčnik Leon, Kerin Josip, Kobi Ferdinand, Kobler Maks, Kobler, brat Vladimira, Kokot Ferdo, Koprivnjak Maks, Kostelič Jože, Kovač Janez, Kovačič Anton, Kozak Juš, Koželj Jaka, Krulej Ernest, Kržič Anton, Kunej Ferdo, Lenard Rado, Leskovec Anton, Lovrič Tone, Modic Josip, Osana, Paulin Rajko, Pečan, Piškur Karel, Rode Anton, Rustja, Šajn Edvard, Štrekelj Franc and Zetner Julij.

All listed members of the Serbian Volunteer Corps (47) were definitely deployed in one of the two volunteer divisions. Given that there is no indication to which division they belonged to (1st or 2nd Volunteer Division), we have formally listed them under the “Serbian Volunteer Corps”, which was the command of both divisions. The collected data reveals that there was 249 Slovenian volunteers in Russia, which were deployed to the following units:

- The 1st Serbian Volunteer Division: 149.
- The 2nd Serbian Volunteer Division: 14.
- The Serbian Volunteer Corps: 47.
- The Matija Gubec Yugoslavian Volunteer Regiment: 39.

Out of that number (249) only 50 Slovenian

Slovenski dobrovoljci v Jugoslovanskem dobrovoljskem polku Matije Gubca v Tomsku, Sibirija, 1916–1920

Ruski ujetniki v Sibiriji so se začeli zbirati v skupine po nacionalnem ključu. Najprej so se organizirali Čehi, ki jih je bilo 60.000, in so celo dosegli, da so jih razglasili za del zavezniške vojske. Sledili so Poljaki, ki jih je bilo 30.000. Srbov, Hrvatov in Slovencev je bilo manj.

Pod vplivom pripadnikov sokolske organizacije in preporodovcev ter v organizaciji vojaških predstavnikov srbske vojske v Rusiji sta bili v Sibiriji poleg nekaj manjših enot organizirani dve večji dobrovoljski enoti, in sicer: v Čeljabinsku polk Srbov, Hrvatov in Slovencev (s slovensko četo) pod poveljstvom majorja Blagotića, v Tomsku v Sibiriji pa jugoslovanski polk Matije Gubca, ki mu je na koncu povejval slovenski aktivni častnik – kapetan Jože Šircelj. Osnovni cilj jugoslovenskih prostovoljev je bil priti v pristanišče Vladivostok in nato z ladjo do solunske fronte oz. v domovino.

Naši dobrovoljci so se v primežu oktobrske revolucije otepali predvsem zavezniških pritskov za boj proti enotam revolucionarne Rdeče armade, zato so se raje opredelili za garnizijsko službo in varovanje sibirske železnice. To je bila hkrati edina možna pot do Tihega oceana in naprej v domovino.

V dokaj težkih taboričnih razmerah so naši dobrovoljci skrbeli tudi za živahno kulturno-prosvetno dejavnost. Vsak teden so izdajali Naš list, prirejali telovadne nastope, koncerte in podobno.

Po prihodu v Vladivostok so iz 3000 dobrovoljev organizirali Odred Srbov, Hrvatov in Slovencev z dvema bataljonoma. V 2. bataljonusu je bila večina slovenskih dobrovoljcev. Prvi konvoj z dvema angleškima ladjama je po trimesečni vožnji avgusta 1920 prispel v domovino. Drugi konvoj s četico slovenskih dobrovoljcev je 10. septembra 1920 prispel v Dubrovnik, potem pa so se brez sprejemov in slovesnosti z vlakom napotili proti Ljubljani.

Po ohranjenih dokumentih in fotografijah je bilo mogoče identificirati te slovenske dobrovoljce (39) v sestavi 3. bataljona Jugoslovenskega polka Matije Gubca v Tomsku, Sibirija oz. 2. bataljona Odreda Srbov Srbov, Hrvatov in Slovencev: volunteers (or 20 percent) arrived at the Macedonian Front. The number was pretty modest and was a result of the great losses in Dobrudja, the dissident movement and general circumstances in Russia, particularly in the time of transfer to the Macedonian Front. We should be aware of the fact that the Matija Gubec Yugoslavian Volunteer Regiment travelled home along a 4,000km long Siberian railway during a fierce Siberian winter. It also had a several-month sail across the Pacific and Indian Ocean and the Adriatic Sea. They arrived home 2 years after the war finished, in 1920.

Ivan Božič, Anton Buh, Ignac Čokl, Pero Dolič, Josip Erat, dr. Božidar Fajdiga, Stanko Gabršček, Godina, Jaka Grčar, Ipavec,

Slovenian volunteers in the Matija Gubec Yugoslavian Volunteer Regiment in Tomsk, Siberia, 1916-1920

The Russian prisoners in Siberia started to assemble by national groups. The first to organise themselves were the Czechs. There were 60,000 of them and they even succeeded in being part of the Allied Army. Second to the Czechs were around 30,000 Poles, while Serbs, Croats and Slovenians were less numerous.

In the framework of the organisation of military representatives of the Serbian Army in Russia and under the influence of the members of the Sokol Organisation and the Preporod Movement, two larger volunteer units were organised in addition to some smaller ones: in Chelyabinsk the regiment of Serbs, Croats and Slovenians (with a Slovenian Company) under the command of Major Blagotić, and in Tomsk (Siberia) the Matija Gubec Yugoslavian Regiment, commanded in the last stage of the battle by an active Slovenian officer, Captain Jože Šircelj. The key objective of Yugoslavian volunteers was to arrive at the Port of Vladivostok and continue to the Macedonian Front by ship and proceed to the homeland.

In the height of the October Revolution, our volunteers struggled against Allied pressure to fight the units of the revolutionary Red Army, for which reason they decided to enter the garrison service instead and to protect the Siberian railroad which was the only possible way to the Pacific Ocean, to the homeland.

In relatively difficult camp conditions, our volunteers tried to ensure lively cultural and educational work. They published a weekly newspaper Naš list (Our paper), organised gymnastic performances, concerts and similar.

After arrival to Vladivostok, a detachment of Serbs, Croats and Slovenians with two battalions was founded, consisting of 3,000 volunteers. In the 2nd Battalion, Slovenian volunteers were predominant.

Franc Jakopec, Mirko Jerše, Kadunc, Jože Kastelic, Kenda, Ivan Košnik, Josip Kozak, Kreč, Vinko Kučan, Tone Lovšin, Avgust Lukačič, Lulik, Vojislav Mole, Mrvar, Anton Neffat, Novak, Metod Paternost, Pless, Bogdan Pogačnik, Joško Prezelj, Josip Rozman, Karel Soss, Šenk, Jože Šircelj, Jože Šmid, Karel Turk, Rado Završnih, Jože Zupančič in Branko Živkovič.

Slovenski dobrovoljci v Jugoslovanskem dobrovoljskem bataljonu kapetana Pivka v Italiji, 1918

Dr. Ljudevit Pivko (1880–1937) iz Markovca pri Ptuju je bil rez. častnik avstro-ogrsko (nadporočnik) in pozneje jugoslovanske (kapetan) vojske, profesor slavistike in germanistike, sokol, narodni delavec, politik – poslanec in pisatelj.

Ob izbruhu prve svetovne vojne je bil kot rez. častnik mobiliziran v avstro-ogrsko vojsko, poslan v Črno goro in Albanijo, leta 1917 pa je bil premeščen v hercegovski polk na soško fronto.

Kot zaveden Slovenec in pripadnik sokolske organizacije je že prej izražal sovražni odpor proti habsburški monarhiji, septembra 1917 pa je pri Carzanu organiziral in izvedel skupinsko deserterstvo 300 pripadnikov 5. bataljona omenjenega polka in prešel na italijansko stran.

O tem dejanju kapetana Pivka še vedno obstajajo različne razlage, saj je bil po mnenju številnih strokovnjakov njegov prehod na italijansko stran dobro izpeljana akcija italijanske obveščevalne službe, ki pa ni bistveno oslabila položaja avstro-ogrskih armade na soški fronti. Skupinsko deserterstvo kapetana Pivka pa bi obravnavali drugače, če bi italijanska vojska v zadnji ofenzivi zadržala mejo pred Ljubljano. Tako pa se je tam znašel podpolkovnik Švabić, ki je s četico srbskih vojakov – ujetnikov prečil italijanske apetite po slovenskem ozemlju. Navidezno nepomembno vojaško dejanje srbskih vojakov je odločilo zahodno slovensko mejo. Nekaj je k temu prispeval tudi odločen avstro-ogrski maršal na soški fronti Svetozar Borojević pl. Bojna, Krajišnik, ki so mu za te zasluge podelili naziv častnega meščana Ljubljane.

Omenjena skupina, imenovana Jugoslovanski dobrovoljski bataljon kapetana Pivka, je izvidniško-prepadno delovala po načrtih

After a three months at sea, the first convoy with two English ships arrived home in August 1920. The second convoy with a small company of Slovenian volunteers arrived in Dubrovnik on 10 September 1920, after which, without any reception or celebration, the soldiers headed to Ljubljana by train.

On the basis of preserved documents and photographs, the following Slovenian volunteers (39) in the formation of the 3rd battalion of the Matija Gubec Yugoslavian Regiment in Tomsk, Siberia or the 2nd battalion of the Division of Serbs, Croats and Slovenians, have been identified:

Božič Ivan, Buh Anton, Čokl Ignac, Didolič Pero, Erat Josip, Dr. Fajdiga Božidar, Gabršček Stanko, Godina, Grčar Jaka, Ipavec, Jakopec Franc, Jerše Mirko, Kadunc, Kastelic Jože, Kenda, Košnik Ivan, Kozak Josip, Kreč, Kučan Vinko, Lovšin Tone, Lukačič Avgust, Lulik, Mole Vojislav, Mrvar, Neffat Anton, Novak, Paternost Metod, Pless, Pogačnik Bogdan, Prezelj Joško, Rozman Josip, Soss Karel, Šenk, Šircelj Jože, Šmid Jože, Turk Karel, Završnih Rado, Zupančič Jože and Živkovič Branko.

Slovenian volunteers in the Captain Pivko's Yugoslav Volunteer Battalion in Italy, 1918

Dr. Ljudevit Pivko (1880-1937) from Markovec near Ptuj was a reserve Officer in the Austro-Hungarian Army (First Lieutenant) and later a Yugoslav Army Captain. He was a professor of Slavistic and Germanic studies, member of the Sokol Organisation, national worker, a politician (member of Parliament) and a writer.

At the outbreak of the First World War he was mobilised to the Austro-Hungarian Army as a reserve officer and sent to Montenegro and Albania. In 1917, he was deployed to the Bosnian-Herzegovinian Regiment at the Isonzo Front.

As a conscious Slovenian and a member of the Sokol Organisation he expressed his discontent with the Hapsburg Monarchy, and organised approximately 300 5th battalion members in September 1917 at Carzano. He has been transferred to the Italian side.

There still exist various views on Captain Pivko's act. According to some experts, his joining the Italian side was a well carried-out action of the Italian intelligence service, which has not essentially weakened the position of the Austro-Hungarian Army at the Isonzo Front. On the other hand, it is true that Captain Pivko's group of deserters would have had more weight, if the Italian Army would have been able to hold the border in Ljubljana during its last offensive. Fortunately, Lieutenant Colonel Švabić, who italijanske armade na soški fronti vse do novembra 1918. Seznama pripadnikov te prvočne Pivkove (dezerterske) oz. italijanske dobrovoljske skupine zaradi zaprtosti italijanskih vojaških arhivov še ni. Pivkov bataljon pa se je številčno povečeval, saj so Italijani vanj vključevali vse avstro-ogrške dezerterje – Srbe, Hrvate in Slovence, ali pa jih je izbiral med ujetniki kar sam kapetan Pivk.

Novembra 1918 je Pivkov dobrovoljski bataljon štel 943 dobrovoljcev, od teh 33 častnikov. Po narodnostni sestavi je bilo v njem 637 Srbov, 176 Hrvatov in 130 Slovencev. V zadnjem obdobju delovanja je kapetan Pivk sprejel idejo Jugoslovanskega odbora, ki je od zaveznikov zahteval, da se med ujetniki avstro-ogrške vojske – Srbi, Hrvati in Slovenci – rekrutirajo dobrovoljci in ustavijo različne bojne enote.

Predsednik srbske vlade Nikola Pašić je od Italijanov celo zahteval, da ustavijo Jugoslovansko legijo, ki bi branila jadransko Primorje. Podobno so storili tudi Čehi. Italijani so nasprotovali takšni ideji zaradi svojih interesov onstran Jadrana, dovolili so samo vzpostavitev Pivkovega Jugoslovanskega dobrovoljskega bataljona, predvsem kot moralni dolg kapetanu Pivku zaradi njegovih zaslug proti avstro-ogrški armadi na soški fronti.

Po prihodu bataljona v Črno goro je kapetan Pivk predal poveljstvo nad bataljonom rez.

prevented the Italians from conquering Slovenian territory with a small company of Serbian soldiers (prisoners), was there at the time. This was an unimportant military act carried-out by Serbian soldiers, as it in fact determined the western Slovenian border. The decisive Austro-Hungarian Marshal at the Isonzo Front, Svetozar Brojević pl. Bojna, Kališnik, undoubtedly contributed to this, since he was awarded citizen service award by the city of Ljubljana.

By November 1918, the before mentioned group, named the Captain Pivko's Yugoslavian Volunteer Battalion, carried out reconnaissance and assault activities at the Isonzo Front in accordance with Italian Army plans. As Italian war archives are closed to the public, the list of soldiers of the original Pivko (deserter) or Italian volunteer group has not yet been made. Due to all Austro-Hungarian deserters (Serbs, Croats, Slovenians), as well as Italian deserters, and due to the prisoners selected by Captain Pivko himself, his Battalion was constantly increasing in number.

In November 1918, Pivko's volunteer battalion had 943 volunteers, out of which 33 were officers. By nationality, the composition of the battalion was as follows: 637 Serbs, 176 Croats and 130 Slovenians. In the last period of his operation, Captain Pivko adopted the idea of the Yugoslav Committee which demanded the Allies to recruit volunteers from the prisoners of the Austro-Hungarian Army (Serbs, Croats and Slovenians) and to establish various battle units.

The president of the Serbian Government, Nikola Pašić even demanded that the Italians establish a Yugoslav Legion, which would defend the Adriatic coastal region. The Czechs did something similar. Naturally, the Italians opposed such an idea due to their interests on the other side of the Adriatic Sea. They only permitted the formation of the Pivko's Yugoslavian Volunteer Battalion, principally as a moral debt to Captain Pivko for his merits in the battles against the Austro-Hungarian Army at the Isonzo Front.

After arriving in Montenegro, Captain Pivko handed over the command of the battalion to reserve Captain Jože Žagar. Three weeks later, the members of the battalion separated and headed home, so the battalion did not participate in the final battles at the Isonzo Front, as previously planned. For this reason the members of Pivko's battalion did not receive the status of volunteers in the Serbian Army or the Army of the Kingdom of Serbs, Croats and Slovenians. Why Captain Pivko decided to hand over command to his deputy, Captain Žagar, after kapetanu Jožetu Žagarju. Po treh tednih so se pripadniki bataljona razšli na svoje domove, tako da bataljon ni sodeloval v sklepnih bojih na solunski fronti, kot so prvotno načrtovali. Pripadniki Pivkovega bataljona tako niso dobili statusa dobrovoljcev srbske oz. vojske SHS. Usoda kapetana Pivka oziroma ozadje njegove odločitve, da po prihodu v Boko Kotorsko predva poveljstvo svojemu namestniku kapetana Žagarju, nista povsem jasna. Odgovor bo treba poiskati v Pivkovih spominih in zapiskih njegovih sobojevnikov. Iz ohranjenih arhivov je mogoče razbrati, da je 7 pripadnikov Pivkovega bataljona vseeno sodelovalo v sklepnih bojih na solunski fronti. To so bili: Ignac Bukovec, Franc Čuček, Jožef Kolar, Friderik Konečnik, Sebastijan Kos, Bogdan Krulj in Franjo Košmrlj.

Od 130 Slovencev – pripadnikov Pivkovega dobrovoljskega bataljona naj bi bilo 12 častnikov, 11 podčastnikov, 13 kaplarjev in 78 vojakov. Po regionalni pripadnosti je bilo 6 dobrovoljcev iz Koroške, 40 iz Primorske, 37 iz Kranjske, 29 iz Štajerske in 1 iz Hrvaške.

Na podlagi ohranjenega obsežnega seznama oz. z izločitvijo slovenskih priimkov je mogoče identificirati vseh 130 pripadnikov bataljona. Ugotoviti nisem mogel imen petnajstih članov sokolske organizacije. Tako prvič predstavljam pripadnike Pivkovega dobrovoljskega bataljona:

Davorin Abram, Ivan Bajželj, Ivan Benčič, Franjo Bensa, Peter Briški, Andrija Buček, Ignac Bukovec, Anton Canko, Edvard Ceraj, Anton Cigoj, Ivan Conjar, Ivan Crnko, Alojzij Črne, Franc Čuček, Jakob Delonga, Alojzij Domajnko, Ivan Drežnjak, Drobec, Ignacij Fajdiga, Ivan Fakin, Ivan Furlan, Ivan Gerbec, Franc Grafenauer, Jožef Gregorič, Anton Grosman, Anton Gruden, Anton Hace, Anton Holc, Franc Jamnik, Franjo Javoršek, Josip Jereb, Franjo Jerman, Josip Jurčič, Ivan Jurič, Luka Kajfež, Jožef Kaluža, Mirko Kambič, Gašper Karlec, Izidor Kelemen, Ivan Kentera, Karel Klamfar, Josip Klavžar, Viktor Kleva, Dušan Kokolj, Jožef Kolar, Friderik Konečnik, Novak Kos, Sebastijan Kos, Franjo Košmerl, Karlo Kovač, Oto Kovačič, Ferdinand Kranjec, Josip Kramar, Ivan Krebs, Josip Križman, Bogdan Krulj, Anton Kržišnik, Gabro Kucelj, Lojze Kumer, Vladimir Kuščer, Franjo Ledeničar, arriving in Boka, is not known. The answer will have to be searched for in Pivko's memoires and notes of his fellow warriors. The preserved archives testify that 7 members of Captain Pivko's Battalion, nevertheless, participated in the final combats at the Macedonian Front. They were:

Bukovec Ignac, Čuček Franc, Kolar Jožef, Konečnik Friderik, Kos Sebastijan, Krulj Bogdan and Košmrlj Franjo.

Out of 130 Slovenians, the members of Pivko's volunteer battalion consisted of 12 officers, 11 non-commissioned officers, 13 corporals and 78 soldiers. By region, 6 volunteers were from the Koroška region, 40 from Primorska, 37 from Kranjska, 29 from Štajerska and 1 from Croatia.

On the basis of a preserved comprehensive list from which I have selected only Slovenian surnames all 130 members of the battalion have been identified. I could not identify the names of fifteen members of the Sokol Organisation. The members of Pivko's volunteer battalion are here presented for the first time:

Slovenski dobrovoljci iz italijanskega ujetniškega taborišča Nocere Umbre, Italija, 1918

Razmere v italijanskih taboriščih so bile za ujetnike avstro-ogrsko vojske neznosne. Šele pod pritiski ujetnikov, predvsem Čehov, so Italijani začeli razporejati ujetnike po narodnosti. Ko je Italija prestopila na stran antantnih zaveznikov, je pod pritiskom Jugoslovanskega odbora (januarja 1915) razmestila ujetne pripadnike avstro-ogrsko vojske – Srbe, Hrvate in Slovence – v posebno taborišče v letoviškem kraju Nocere Umbre. Predstavniki Jugoslovenskega odbora in srbskega vrhovnega poveljstva so tudi tam agitirali in nagovarjali dobrovoljce za srbsko vojsko.

Taborišno življenje so si slovenski dobrovoljci dobro uredili in organizirali, saj so izdajali celo svoj časopis. Usmerjali so jih sokoli in preporodovci. Italijani so poskušali narediti razdor tudi med ujetniki, Srbi na eni ter Hrvati in Slovenci na drugi strani, vendar jim ni uspelo.

Čeprav so taboriščni iz Nocere Umbre vsestransko sodelovali s pripadniki Pivkovega bataljona, ni jasno, zakaj nazadnje niso skupaj odšli na solunsko fronto.

Slovenian volunteers from the Italian Prisoner Camp Nocera Umbra, Italy 1918

The circumstances in the Italian camps were intolerable for the prisoners of the Austro-Hungarian Army. Only after having experienced pressures from the prisoners, mostly Czech prisoners, did the Italians start to separate prisoners by nationality. When Italy took the side of the Triple Entente Allies it had put under the pressure of the Yugoslavian Committee (January 1915) the imprisoned members of the Austro-Hungarian Army (Serbs, Croats and Slovenians) in a separate camp in Nocera Umbra (a vacation resort). Also, this camp had agitated representatives of the Yugoslav Committee and the Serbian Supreme Command. Thus they addressed the volunteers and suggested they joined the Serbian Army.

Slovenian volunteers arranged and organised their life in the camp well. They even published their own newspaper. Naturally, the main directives were given by the members of the Sokol Organisation and the Preporod Movement. The Italians tried to seed disagreement among the prisoners, hoping that the Serbs would turn against the Croats and Slovenians. But they failed.

Even though the prisoners in the Nocera Umbra camp and the members of the Pivko's Battalion cooperated in various ways, it is unclear why they did not jointly head to the Macedonian Front.

The order for the volunteers' departure to Thessaloniki came on 1 December 1918. In early morning, 3 December, all volunteers boarded a train that went from Nocera Umbra across Ancona to the port Bari. There were 482 volunteers on the train; 55 Slovenian and 7 members of the Captain Pivko's Yugoslavian Volunteer Battalion (I have acquired personal information about these members). At the last station, the Italian Army tried to prevent the debarkment of the volunteers, but Pivko's volunteers dispersed the Italian soldiers with hand grenades. All volunteers borded the ship Coccrico, which headed to Thessaloniki.

Volunteers in the Serbian Army from the Italian Prisoner Camp Nocera Umbra 1918 – Thessaloniki je prišlo 1. decembra 1918. Zgodaj zjutraj 3. decembra so se vsi dobrovoljci vkrcali na vlak, ki je peljal iz N. Umbre prek Ancone v pristanišče Bari. Na vlaku je bilo 482 dobrovoljcev, od teh 55 slovenskih in 7 pripadnikov jugoslovanskega dobrovoljskega bataljona kapetana Pivka (za katere smo ugotovili osebne podatke). Italijanska vojska je na zadnji postaji želela preprečiti izkrcanje dobrovoljcev, vendar so Pivkovi dobrovoljci z ročnimi bombami razgnali italijanske vojake. Vsi dobrovoljci so se vkrcali na ladjo Coccoio na poti v Solun.

Slovenski izseljenci iz ZDA – dobrovoljci v srbski vojski 1912–1918

Prvi dobrovoljci iz prekomorskih držav so v srbsko vojsko začeli prihajati leta 1912, bolj organizirano in množično pa 1914, z začetkom prve svetovne vojne. Zaradi nevtralnosti ZDA je bilo zbiranje dobrovoljcev oteženo, včasih tudi ovirano. Razmere so se popolnoma spremenile leta 1917, ko so ZDA napovedale vojno Nemčiji. Srbska vlada je decembra 1917 v Severno in Južno Ameriko napotila vojaško misijo (6 častnikov in 8 podčastnikov), v kateri sta bila tudi polkovnik Janko Stibilj – Vukasovič in major Vekoslav Fon. Organizirali so dva zbirna centra dobrovoljcev v Sussexu in Levisu v Kanadi, od koder so jih z ladjami vozili do Bizerte in nato v Solun. Že prej pa so v ZDA delovali trije Slovenci, člani Jugoslovanskega

Slovenian expatriates in the USA – volunteers in the Serbian Army, 1912-1918

The first volunteers from overseas joined the Serbian Army in 1912. A more organised and massive inflow of volunteers occurred in 1914, coinciding with the beginning of the First World War. Due to the fact that USA was neutral, it was difficult to collect volunteers. In 1917, after the USA declared war on Germany, the situation changed completely. In December 1917, the Serbian Government sent a military mission (6 officers and 8 non-commissioned officers) to North and South America. Colonel Janko Stibilj – Vukasović and Major Vekoslav Fon were a part of this mission. They organised two assembly centres in Sussex and Levis in Canada, from where volunteers were transported to Bizerte and afterwards to Thessaloniki. Three Slovenians, members of the Yugoslav Committee, were active in the USA even before that time: Dr. Bogumil Vošnjak, Dr. Niko Zupanič and Dr. Drago Marušič.

Their objective was to recruit as many Slovenian expatriates, as Serbian Army volunteers as possible, and at the same time present to the American public Slovenia's desires to secede from Austria-Hungary and to unite with Serbs and Croats in a separate state – the Kingdom of Yugoslavia. They were also active in collecting material and financial help.

The results were soon visible. The inflow of overseas expatriates (volunteers) to the Macedonian Front had increased greatly.

6,243 volunteers came to the Macedonian Front from the USA and Canada. Another 2,000 volunteers arrived after the breakthrough of the front. Altogether there were over 8,000 volunteers, a third of all volunteers at the Macedonian Front. There were 27 (or odbora: dr. Bogumil Vošnjak, dr. Niko Zupanič in dr. Drago Marušič.

Njihova cilja sta bila pridobiti čim več slovenskih izseljencev kot dobrovoljcev srbske vojske ter ameriški javnosti predstaviti slovenske težnje po odcepitvi od Avstro-Ogrske in združitvi s Srbi in Hrvati v samostojno državo – kraljevino Jugoslavijo. Zbirali so tudi finančno in gmotno pomoč.

Rezultati so se pokazali kmalu, saj se je močno povečal prihod prekomorskih izseljencev – dobrovoljcev na solunsko fronto.

Iz Severne Amerike, ZDA in Kanade je prišlo na solunsko fronto 6.243 dobrovoljcev, po preboju pa še 2.000, skupno torej več kot 8.000, kar je bila več kot tretjina vseh dobrovoljcev srbske vojske na solunski fronti. Slovenskih je bilo 27 ali 0,34 odstotka.

V Južni Ameriki se je v začetku prijavilo največ dobrovoljcev med Dalmatinci, pa tudi 1500 Črnogorcev je bilo pripravljenih vstopiti v srbsko vojsko. Končni rezultat iz Južne Amerike, kjer je bivalo 5.000 naših izseljencev, je bil zavidanja vreden, saj se je do januarja 1917 prijavilo 475 dobrovoljcev, skoraj 10 odstotkov. Najpomembnejši zbirni center je bil Antofagasta.

Po nekaterih ocenah se je iz Južne in Severne Amerike prijavilo 10.000 dobrovoljcev.

Po ohranjenih podatkih v dobrovoljskem arhivu o izseljencih iz ZDA – dobrovoljcih srbske vojske v obdobju 1912–1918 sem po priimku in rojstnem mestu izločil te slovenske izseljence – dobrovoljce (27):

Marko Biher, Blaž Božič, Florijan Buklič, Jakob Cetinski, Matija Čop, Alojz Hlebanja, Alojz Jager, Ivan Jamnik, Ivan Javornik, Janko Javornik, Franjo Jovan, Franjo Lavrič, Blaž Logar, Josip Morig, Josip Pogačar, Ivan Prevec, Mike Pucelj, Đorđe Radojičić, Vekoslav Ribič, Peter Rigo, Franc Rolih – Mike, Josip Samec, Franjo Sveti, Ivan Torbica, Josip Trošt, Martin Virant in Albert Zajc.

Slovenski dobrovoljci srbske vojske na solunski fronti 1917–1918

Solunska fronta je bila vzpostavljena sredi leta 1916 na odločno zahtevalo srbske vlade, a po sklepnu antantnih zaveznikov. Razprostirala se je na stari meji med Srbijo in Grčijo oz. na črti: reka Vardar – planine Dudice – Kožuh – Vetrenik – Dobro polje – Kajmakčalan – mesti Lerin – Bitolj. Na njej so bile proti močni

0.34 percent) Slovenian volunteers among them.

In South America, the majority of volunteers were from Dalmatia. 1,500 Montenegrins also prepared to join the Serbian Army. Approximately 5,000 expatriates resided in South America. By January 1917, 475 volunteers applied, which is almost 10 percent of the expatriates. The main assembly centre was in Antofagasta.

Some estimates suggest that approximately 10,000 volunteers came from North America.

With the help of preserved data in the expatriates' volunteer archive in the USA I have identified the following Slovenian expatriates (volunteers in the Serbian Army from 1912 to 1918) (27) by surname and birth town:

Biher Marko, Božič Blaž, Buklič Florijan, Cetinski Jakob, Čop Matija, Hlebanja Alojz, Jager Alojz, Jamnik Ivan, Javornik Ivan, Javornik Janko, Jovan Franjo, Lavrič Franjo, Logar Blaž, Morig Josip, Pogačar Josip, Prevec Ivan, Pucelj Mike, Radojičić Đorđe, Ribič Vekoslav, Rigo Peter, Rolih Franc – Mike, Samec Josip, Sveti Franjo, Torbica Ivan, Trošt Josip, Virant Martin and Zajc Albert.

Slovenian volunteers in the Serbian Army at the Macedonian Front 1917–1918

Following the decision of the Triple Entente Allies, the Macedonian Front was established on the resolute demand of the Serbian Government. It spread across the old Serbian and Greek border (on the line of the Vardar river, the Dudice, Kožuh, Veternik Hill, Dobro polje and the Kajmakčalan mountains, the towns Lerin and Bitolj), on which the French, Greek and Russian Allied units together with three Serbian Armies were deployed against a strong German-Bulgarian Army with approximately 170,000 men. The chief commander at the Macedonian Front was General Sarrail. The reorganised units of the Serbian Army as well as numerous volunteers in the Serbian Army from Russia, expatriates and others, were planned to be the main offensive force. The first units of the Serbian Army arrived to the Macedonian Front from the Island Krk in autumn of 1916. They immediately started limited local attacks, which were not always successful. This applies in particular to the battles on the Kajmakčalan Mountain where all three Slovenian volunteers died.

The first volunteers from the Russian unit arrived at the Macedonian Front in April 1916. This was a volunteer battalion from the 1st Serbian Volunteer Division. In the autumn of the same year a second battalion arrived. The moral state of the volunteers in the 1st Battalion that came from Russia was nemško-bolgarski armadi, ki je štela 170.000 mož, razporejene francoske, grške in ruske zavezniške enote ter tri srbske armade. Glavni poveljnik na solunski fronti je bil francoski general Sarrail. Po načrtih naj bi bile najpo-membnejša ofenzivna sila obnovljene enote srbske vojske, pa tudi številni dobrovoljci srbske vojske iz Rusije, izseljencev in od drugod. Prve enote srbske vojske so prišle na solunsko fronto s Krfa jeseni 1916 in takoj začele omejene lokalne napade, ki pa niso bili vedno uspešni. To velja posebno za boje na Kajmakčalanu, kjer so padli tudi trije slovenski dobrovoljci.

Prve dobrovoljske enote iz Rusije so prišle na solunsko fronto aprila 1917. Šlo je za bataljon dobrovoljcev iz 1. srbske dobrovoljske divizije. Jeseni istega leta je prišel še drugi bataljon. Morala v prvih dobrovoljskih bataljonih iz Rusije je bila na odlični ravni. Dobrovoljci so bili željni bojev in so zahtevali takojšen odhod na fronto. A z njimi so v začetku samo nadomeščali izgube v srbskih polkih, ki so že bili na solunski fronti v nenehnih bojih z bolgarsko in avstrijsko-nemško vojsko.

Srbski vojski je poveljeval regent Aleksander, a načelnik vrhovnega poveljstva je postal armadni general Petar Bojović. Armatadom so poveljevali: 1. armadi, z moravsko in vardarsko divizijo (pozneje preimenovani v jugoslovansko) – vojvoda Živojin Mišić; 2. armadi, s Šumadijsko in Timoško divizijo – vojvoda Stepa Stepanović in 3. armadi, z Drinsko in Donavsko divizijo – general Miloš Vasić. V rezervi sta bila konjeniška divizija in Dobrovoljski odred vojvode Vuka. Srbska vojska je štela 150.000 vojakov in dobrovoljcev.

Zaradi motiviranosti dobrovoljcev za boj v srbski vojski za jugoslovanske ideale in cilje so številni dobrovoljci, tudi Slovenci, zavrnili vojaško prisego srbski vojski in zahtevali prisego še nevzpostavljeni jugoslovanski vojski. Zaradi tega je 29. decembra 1917 prestolonaslednik Aleksander Karađorđević ukazal razpustitev Vardarske divizije. Iz njenega članstva in prispevki dobrovoljcev je bila ustanovljena Jugoslovanska divizija. Njen poveljnik je postal polkovnik Milan Tucaković.

Po podatkih srbske vrhovnega poveljstva z dne 23. septembra 1917 je bilo na solunski fronti 21.000 dobrovoljcev, med njimi 141 Slovencev. Večina je bila razporejena v Jugoslovanski diviziji, manjši del pa v drugih srbskih divizijah. Po ohranjenih podatkih je mogoče excellent. The volunteers were eager to fight and demanded an immediate departure to the front. They were initially used only for replacing injured troops in the Serbian regiments, which had been already engaging in constant combats with the Bulgarian and Austrian-German Armies at the Macedonian Front.

Regent Alexander commanded the Serbian Army, while the Army General Petar Bojović became commander of the Supreme Command. Commanders of the armies were: commander of the 1st Army with the Morava and Vardar Division (later renamed the Yugoslav Army) was Duke Živojin Mišić; commander of the 2nd Army with the Šumadija and Timočka Division was Duke Stepa Stepanović and the commander of the 3rd Army with the Drina and Danube Division was General Miloš Vasić. The Cavalry Division and the Volunteer Corps of Duke Vuk was a reserve unit. The Serbian Army had approximately 150,000 soldiers and volunteers.

The volunteers were motivated to fight in the Serbian Army because they supported the establishment of Yugoslavia. Therefore, many of them, including Slovenians, rejected the military oath to the Serbian Army and demanded an informal oath to the Yugoslav Army. Due to the latter, the crown prince ordered the dissolution of the Vardar Division on 29 December 1917. From its formation and with the newly arrived volunteers, the Yugoslav Division was established. Colonel Milan Tucaković was appointed as its commander.

According to information from the Serbian Supreme Command, dated 23 September 1917, there were approximately 21,000 volunteers at the Macedonian Front, out of which 141 were Slovenians. Most of them were assigned to the Yugoslavian Division, while a smaller part remained in other Serbian divisions. Based on information, all Slovenian volunteers – the Thessaloniki fighters (194 in total), can be identified by individual units, as follows:

The first units of the Serbian Aviation Division participated in battles at the Macedonian Front with material and technical support from the Triple Entente Allies. According to some information there were supposed to be more Slovenian volunteers, especially pilots, participating in the Serbian Army, but this is not substantially supported.

Slovenian volunteers in the Serbian Army in the battles for Carinthia, 1918-1919

Before the Christmas holidays in 1918, the Serbian Minister of Military Affairs Mihajlo Rašić sent a military mission commanded by General Krst Smiljanić and Lieutenant Colonel Milutin Nadić to Ljubljana. The mission's objective was to form the Danube Division, which took over the command of all military units in Slovenia on 1 February 1919. This concerned mainly General Maister's units, which were already engaged in combats in Carinthia. Due

Slovenski dobrovoljci srbske vojske v bojih za Koroško 1918–1919

Pred božičnimi prazniki 1918 je srbski vojni minister Mihajlo Rašić poslal v Ljubljano vojaško misijo z generalom Krstom Smiljanićem in podpolkovnikom Milutinom Nedićem na čelu. Misija je imela nalogu, da vzpostavi območje Dravske divizije, katere poveljstvo je 1. februarja 1919 prevzelo poveljevanje vsem vojaškim enotam v Sloveniji. Šlo je predvsem za enote generala Rudolfa Maistra, ki so se že bojevale na Koroškem. Za nadaljevanje bojev za priključitev Koroške novonastajajoči državi SHS je poveljstvo Dravske divizije začasno vzpostavilo pet odredov, imenovalo njihove poveljnike in odredilo konkretnne naloge (smeri napada), in sicer:

- Labodski odred, sestava: 4 pehotni bataljoni, 4 topniške baterije in konjeniški oddelek, 2.000 vojakov in 14 topov, poveljnik – generalmajor Rudolf Maister, smer napada: Dravograd–Št. Pavel;
 - Koroški odred: sestava: 6 pehotnih bataljonov, 5 topniških baterij in konjeniški eskadron, 3.200 vojakov in 26 topov, poveljnik – polkovnik Ljubomir Marić, smer napada: Guštanj (Ravne)– Črna–Pliberk–Velikovec–Gospovetsko polje;
 - Jezerski odred: sestava: 7 pehotnih bataljonov, 8 topniških baterij, konjeniški eskadron, 4.200 vojakov in 31 topov, poveljnik – polkovnik Dobrosav Milenković, smer glavnega napada: Jezersko–Železna Kaplja–Celovec;
 - Ljubeljski odred, sestava: pehotni bataljon, 2 topniški bateriji in oddelok dobrovoljcev, 220 vojakov in 8 topov, poveljnik – polkovnik Savo Tripković, smer napada: Ljubelj–Borovlje–Celovec;
 - Jeseniški odred, sestava: 2 pehotni četi, prostovoljci (187 vojakov) poročnika Šefmana in 2 topovski posadki, 400 vojakov, 15 mitraljezov in 2 topova, poveljnik kapetan Kujundžić je bil v obrambi Podrožce in na izvidniških nalogah;
 - rezerva: 2 pehotna bataljona in 2 četi z razporedom v Ljubljani in Slovenj Gradcu.
- Vsi slovenski dobrovoljci so bili razporejeni po manjših skupinah v 45. polku iz Maribora, to the continuation of the fights for the accession of Carinthia to the newly founded Kingdom of Serbs, Croats and Slovenians (SCS), the command of the Danube Division temporarily formed five detachments, appointed their commanders and ordered specific tasks (direction of attack), i.e.:

- The Labot Detachment, composition: 4 infantry battalions, 4 artillery batteries and a cavalry section; approximately 2,000 soldiers and 14 guns; commander Major General Rudolf Maister; directions of attack: Dravograd – Št. Pavel.
- The Carinthia Detachment, composition: 6 infantry battalions, 5 gun batteries and a cavalry squadron; approximately 3,200 soldiers and 26 guns; commander Colonel Ljubomir Marić; directions of attack: Guštanj (Ravne na Koroškem) – Črna – Bleiburg –Völkermarkt – Zollfeld.
- The Jezersko Detachment, composition: 7 infantry battalions, 8 gun batteries, a cavalry squadron; approximately 4,200 soldiers and 31 guns; commander Colonel Dobrosav Milenković; direction of the main attack: Jezersko – Bad Eisenkappel – Klagenfurt.
- Ljubelj Detachment, composition: an infantry battalion, 2 gun batteries and a volunteer detachment; approximately 220 soldiers and 8 guns; commander Savo Tripković; direction of attack: Loiblpass – Ferlach – Klagenfurt.
- Jesenice Detachment, composition: 2 infantry units, volunteers (187 soldiers) of Lieutenant Štefman and 2 gun crews; approximately 400 soldiers, 15 machine guns and 2 cannons; commander Captain Kujundžić has participated in the defence of Podrožca and in reconnaissance tasks.
- Reserve: 2 infantry battalions and 2 companies with formation in Ljubljana and Slovenj Gradec.

All Slovenian volunteers were allocated to smaller groups in the 45th Regiment from Maribor, which was the main force of the Jezersko Detachment. Other volunteers, fighters at the Macedonian Front (Croats, Bosnians and others) were deployed to the so-called "Yugoslav Mixed Battalion" under the command of Captain Krstić.

On 6 June 1919, Klagenfurt was liberated by the Jezersko and the Ljubljana detachments during fierce combat. This signified a successful end of the Carinthian offensive and, at the same time, from the military aspect, the question of Carinthia's accession to Slovenia or Yugoslavia was solved.

Of course, the diplomatic and political decision of the superpowers was different: It was not for the military force of the rising Yugoslavia to make decisions, ki je bil glavna sila Jezerskega odreda. Preostali dobrovoljci – solunci (Hrvati, Bosanci in drugi) so bili razporejeni v t. i. jugoslovanskem kombiniranem bataljonu pod poveljstvom kapetana Krstića.

Celovec je bil osvobojen 6. junija 1919 z odločno bojno akcijo Jezerskega in Ljubljanskega odreda. S tem je bila uspešno končana koroška ofenziva in z vojaškega stališča je bila rešena tudi priključitev Koroške Sloveniji oz. Jugoslaviji.

Diplomatsko-politična odločitev velesil pa je bila drugačna: ne more odločati vojaška sila nastajajoče Jugoslavije, temveč naj odločijo prebivalci Koroške na plebiscitu.

Rezultati koroškega plebiscita so znani, pa tudi predigre in vzroki zanje. Koroška je bila izgubljena ...

V bojih zanjo je sodelovalo 21 slovenskih dobrovoljev srbske vojske. Šestnajst je bilo že dobrovoljskih veteranov, saj so sodelovali v bojih v Dobrudži (8) in na solunski fronti (8), dva sta prišla na Koroško iz Rusije, trije pa so kot dobrovoljci vstopili v srbsko vojsko. Drugih slovenskih dobrovoljcov, ki so sodelovali v Labodskem in Ljubljanskem odredu, ne štejemo med dobrovoljce srbske vojske, ker se štejejo med Maistrove borce za Koroško.

Tako med koroške borce štejemo te dobrovoljce srbske vojske:

Urh Bazant, Ivan Dobrovolt, Anton Flander, Josip Goli, Franjo Gorečan, Jože Hočevar, Josip Katič, Valentin Kejzar, Jože Kerin, Franc Konič, Franjo Koščak, Jaka Koželj, Vinko Krže, Edvard Prinčič, Ivan Skvarča, Ivan Stele, Ernest Turk, Drago Ukmari, Stanko Velkovrh, Gregor Šašelj – Wieser in Franc Zorič.

Številčno stanje slovenskih dobrovoljcov v srbski vojski 1912–1918

V Rusiji so agitirali in pridobivali dobrovoljce za srbsko vojsko uradni vojaški predstavniki Srbije v Rusiji, pa tudi številni visoki srbski častniki, ki so načrtno obiskovali ruska ujetniška taborišča.

Prvi rezultati so se pokazali aprila 1916, ko so našeli 9.733 dobrovoljcev. Med njimi je bilo 262 častnikov in 10 sanitetnih častnikov – zdravnikov in medicincev. Po narodnostni sestavi je bila prva skupina častnikov – dobrovoljcev takšna: 120 Srbov, 90 Hrvatov, 40 but for the inhabitants of Carinthia at the plebiscite.

The results of the Carinthian plebiscite are known and so are the games played in the background and the reasons for them. Carinthia was lost.

21 Slovenian volunteers in the Serbian Army participated in the fights for Carinthia. Sixteen of them were already volunteer veterans, for they participated in the Dobrudža Battles (8) and in combats at the Macedonian Front (8). Two of them came to Carinthia from Russia, while three entered the Serbian Army as volunteers. Those Slovenian volunteers who participated in the Labot and Ljubljana detachment are not considered as volunteers in the Serbian Army. They are categorised as "Maister's fighters".

The following Serbian Army volunteers are considered to be Carinthian fighters:

Bazant Urh, Dobrovolt Ivan, Flander Anton, Goli Josip, Gorečan Franjo, Hočevar Jože, Katič Josip, Kejzar Valentin, Kerin Jože, Konič Franc, Koščak Franjo, Koželj Jaka, Krže Vinko, Prinčič Edvard, Skvarča Ivan, Stele Ivan, Turk Ernest, Ukmari Drago, Velkovrh Stanko, Wieser – Šašelj Gregor and Zorič Franc.

The number of Slovenian volunteers in the Serbian Army, 1912-1918

Serbia's official military representatives in Russia and a larger number of other high ranking Serbian officials that, calculatedly, visited Russian prisoner camps, were in charge of the recruitment of volunteers for the Serbian Army.

In April 1916 there were a total of 9,733 volunteers. Among them were 262 officers and 10 medical officers – doctors and medical students. The national composition of this first group of officers (volunteers) was as follows: 120 Serbs, 90 Croats, 40 Slovenians, 9 Czechs and 3 Russians.

As regards to the number of Slovenians, the information is relatively accurate. We have identified 39 Slovenian officers. Most of them (36) can be seen on a photograph published in the bulletin "Dobrovolti kladivarji Jugoslavije" (Volunteers of Yugoslavia) (p. 338). A report prepared by Dr. Ante Mandić, a delegate of the Serbian Government, who lived in Odessa at the time, testifies that upon formation of the 1st Serbian Volunteer Division in April 1916, only 14 Slovenian volunteers were members of this division.

Because of bad decisions made by the command of the 1st Serbian Volunteer Division in the autumn of 1916 in Dobrudža, the division lost almost half of its men. As a result, the number of volunteers was reduced considerably. For this reason, the Serbian Volunteer Slovencev, 9 Čehov in 3 Rusi.

Podatek o številu Slovencev je točen, saj je tudi v tem opisu identificiranih 39 slovenskih častnikov, od katerih je večina (36) tudi na fotografiji, objavljeni v zborniku Dobrovoljci kladi-varji Jugoslavije (str. 338). Iz referata dr. Anteja Mandića, ki je tedaj kot odposlanec srbske vlade bival v Odesi, pa je razvidno, da je bilo aprila 1916 ob vzpostavitvi 1. srbske dobrovoljske divizije v njej samo 14 slovenskih dobrovoljcev.

Zaradi nepravilne uporabe 1. srbske dobrovoljske divizije jeseni 1916 v Dobrudži, kjer je izgubila skoraj polovico svojih mož, se je število dobrovoljcev močno zmanjšalo. Tako je srbski dobrovoljski korpus v Rusiji, ki je imel tedaj 43.000 vojakov, leto pozneje uspel poslati na solunsko fronto le 12.640 vojakov.

Na zmanjševanje števila dobrovoljcev je poleg posledic poraza v Dobrudži vplivalo tudi destruktivno delovanje avstro-ogrsko obveščevalne službe, ki je z grožnjami vplivala na vojake, hkrati pa zahrbtno podpirala t. i. disidente. Šlo je za skupino slovenskih in hrvaških častnikov, ki so marca 1917 poveljniku dobrovoljskega korpusa poslali peticijo, v kateri so zapisali sedem zahtev:

- da se ime »Srbski dobrovoljski korpus« spremeni v »Jugoslovanski dobrovoljski korpus«;
- da se srbski emblemi in oznaake zamenjajo z jugoslovanskimi;
- da se slovenski in hrvaški vojaki razporedijo v homogene narodnostne enote, ki naj jim

Corps in Russia, which at the time had around 43,000 soldiers, managed to send a total of 12,640 soldiers to the Macedonian Front the next year.

In addition to the consequences of the defeat in Dobrudža the destructive action of the Austro-Hungarian military and intelligence service that influenced the military formation with threats and at the same time treacherously supported the so-called dissidents also influenced the reduction of volunteers. The service was composed of a group of Slovenian and Croatian officers, who sent a petition to the commander of the volunteer corps in March 1917 in which they listed their seven demands:

- The name "Serbian Volunteer Corps" is to change into the "Yugoslavian Volunteer Corps".
- Serbian emblems and insignia are to be replaced with those of Yugoslavia.
- Slovenian and Croatian volunteers are to be assigned to homogeneous national units, which will be commanded by Slovenian or Croatian officers and non-Commissioned Officers.
- In legal terms, volunteers are not to be considered members of the Army of the Kingdom of Serbia, but sworn as soldiers of the future Kingdom of Yugoslavia.
- Volunteer units are not to be used for combat missions outside their homeland (in Russia and Greece) or outside the borders of the future Yugoslavia.
- In regards to material and financial aspects, all volunteers (soldiers and officers) should be made equal with the members of the regular Serbian Army etc.

Despite the fact that the Serbian Supreme Command accepted the key demands of the dissidents, they carried on with various destructive and violent actions. This had a negative influence on the number of members in the Serbian Volunteer Corps in which, according to official information, there were 243 Slovenian volunteers (204 soldiers and 39 officers) in May 1917. The situation regarding units was as follows:

- The Corps Headquarter Units – 8 soldiers.
- The Volunteer Battalion – 7 officers and 6 soldiers.
- The 1st Volunteer Battalion – 17 officers and 6 soldiers.
- The 2nd Volunteer Battalion – 15 officers and 184 soldiers.

In September 1917, the 1st Serbian Volunteer Division was ordered to move to the Macedonian Front. The direction of the move was: Odessa – Arkhangelsk – France – Thessaloniki. On 7 December 1917, the division arrived at its destination. At departure the division included 13,066 soldiers, 86 out poveljujejo slovenski oz. hrvaški častniki in podčastniki;

- da se dobrovoljci pravno ne štejejo za pripadnike vojske kraljevine Srbije, temveč samo kot vojaki prihodnje kraljevine Jugoslavije;
- enot dobrovoljcev ne smejo uporabljati za bojne naloge zunaj domovine (v Rusiji in Grčiji) oz. zunaj meja prihodnje Jugoslavije;
- gmotno in finančno je treba vse dobrovoljce – vojake in častnike izenačiti s pripadniki redne srbske vojske itn.

Čeprav je srbsko vrhovno poveljstvo sprejelo ključne zahteve disidentov, so ti nadaljevali destruktivne in razbijaške akcije. To je zmanjševalo število članov Srbskega dobrovoljskega korpusa, v katerem je bilo maja 1917, po uradnih podatkih, le 243 slovenskih dobrovoljcev (204 vojakov in 39 častnikov). Po enotah je bilo takole:

- štabne enote korpusa – 8 vojakov;
- dopolnilni bataljon – 7 častnikov in 6 vojakov;
- 1. srbska dobrovoljska divizija – 17 častnikov in 6 vojakov;
- 2. srbska dobrovoljska divizija – 15 častnikov in 184 vojakov.

1. srbska dobrovoljska divizija je 27. septembra 1917 dobila povelje za premik na solunsko fronto. Smer premika je bila: Odesa–Arhangelsk–Francija–Solun. Na cilj je prispela 7. decembra 1917. Ob odhodu je štela 13.066 vojakov, med katerimi je bilo tudi 86 slovenskih. Po prihodu v Solun je imela le še 2.545 vojakov in 158 častnikov.

Vseeno se je na solunski fronti zbral 21.000 dobrovoljcev, med katerimi je bilo po podatkih srbskega vrhovnega poveljstva 141 Slovencev. Mi smo našeli 194 slovenskih dobrovoljcev – solunskih borcev (45 častnikov, 11 podčastnikov in 138 vojakov). Številne enote pa niso uspele pravočasno priti na solunsko fronto.

Pdobno se je dogajalo z drugimi enotami dobrovoljcev. Jugoslovanski dobrovoljski bataljon kapetana Pivka je bil sicer prepeljan iz Italije v Boko Kotorsko, vendar se z izjemo posameznikov (7) ni vključil med enote srbske vojske na solunski fronti, zato njegovim pripadnikom ni priznan status dobrovoljcev srbske vojske. Jugoslovanski dobrovoljski polk Matije Gubca iz Tomska v Sibiriji se je z bojem prebil do pristanišča Vladivostok in se šele septembra 1920 z ladjo vrnil v domovino.

of which were Slovenian volunteers. After the arrival to Thessaloniki the division had only 2,545 soldiers and 158 officers.

Nevertheless 21,000 volunteers gathered at the Macedonian Front. According to the Serbian Supreme Command there were 141 Slovenians among them. We have identified 194 Slovenian volunteers – the Thessaloniki fighters (45 officers, 11 non-commissioned officers and 138 soldiers). Many units were not able to arrive at the Macedonian Front on time.

The same occurred with other volunteer units. The Captain Pivko's Yugoslavian Volunteer Battalion was transferred from Italy to Boka Kotarska. Apart from some individuals (7), the battalion did not join the units of the Serbian Army at the Macedonian Front and hence its members did not become a part of the Serbian Army Volunteers. The Matija Gubec Yugoslav Volunteer Regiment from Tomsk in Siberia fought its way to the port of Vladivostok and returned home in September 1920.

After the war finished, the Serbian Supreme Command conferred 26,455 soldiers and officers the status of volunteer. In 1914 and 1915 3,500 volunteers headed to Siberia across Danube all by themselves. The following number of soldiers and officers from Serbian volunteer corps units received the status of volunteer:

- The 1st Serbian Volunteer Division – 18,388 soldiers and officers.
- The 2nd Serbian Volunteer Division – 2,875 soldiers and officers.
- The Corps Headquarters and the Headquarter Units – 492 soldiers and officers.
- Additional Battalion – 1,200 soldiers and officers.

Altogether, 567 Slovenian volunteers were identified (175 officers, 50 non-commissioned officers and 343 soldiers). 435 Slovenian volunteers in the Serbian Army (162 officers, 26 non-commissioned officer and 247 soldiers) participated in the Serbian Liberation Wars. Naturally, 123 members of Pivko's Battalion, 5 Carinthian fighters and 4 volunteers, who stayed in Russia, are not included. A detailed overview by periods and military units is as follows:

Ranjeni in padli slovenski dobrovoljci v srbski vojski 1912–1918

V srbski vojski je identificiranih 567 slovenskih dobrovoljev. Od teh jih je padlo (umrlo) 42, kar je 7,41 odstotka. Padel je vsak trinajsti dobrovoljec.

Največ slovenskih dobrovoljev je bilo ubitih jeseni 1916 v Dobrudži – štirinajst (14) ali 38

Out of all Slovenian volunteers, 40 percent of officers and non-commissioned officers died. This immense loss proves that officers, in particular non-commissioned officers, were the most active in the battles. Categorised by military ranks, the following Slovenian volunteers were killed in action:

Reserve officers – ten (10) or 24 percent.

Non-commissioned officers – seven (7) or 16 percent.

odstotkov in na solunski fronti 1916–1918 prav toliko. V Srbiji je padlo sedem (7) slovenskih dobrovoljcev po preboju solunske fronte in trije (3) v cerski in kolubarski bitki ali skupno 24 odstotkov. Posamično so padli še: po eden na Doberdobu v Italiji in v Sibiriji, po eden pa je umrl v Tolounu v Franciji in Murmanu – Polarinem krogu v Rusiji.

Največ slovenskih dobrovoljcev – 78,5 odstotka je padlo (umrlo) v letih 1916 (v Dobrudži) in 1918 (na solunski fronti), celoten pregled po letih pa je tak:

- 1914 – štirje (4) padli;
- 1915 – eden (1) padel;
- 1916 – sedemnajst (17) padlih;
- 1917 – štirje (4) padli;
- 1918 – šestnajst (16) padlih.

Od slovenskih dobrovoljcev je padlo kar 40 odstotkov častnikov in podčastnikov, kar so bile nenormalne izgube, hkrati pa dokaz, da so se prav oni najbolj izpostavljeni v boju. Tako je po strukturi vojaških činov od slovenskih dobrovoljcev padlo:

- rez. častnikov – deset (10) ali 24 odstotkov;
- podčastnikov – sedem (7) ali 16 odstotkov in
- vojakov in kaplarjev – petindvajset (25) ali 60 odstotkov.

Zaradi pietetnih razlogov, predvsem pa dejstva, da prvič predstavljamo mesta znanih grobišč in spominskih znamenj ter kraje, kjer bi jih bilo treba še postaviti (po sklenjenem meddržavnem sporazumu), navajam abecedni seznam vseh (42) padlih (umrilih) slovenskih dobrovoljcev s krajem grobišča (znanega – neznanega):

- Anton Batič, narednik, padel 23. 9. 1916 v Dobrudži – vojaški grob neznan;
- Franjo Bračič, rez. podporočnik, umrl 23. 9. 1916 v Dobrudži zaradi ran in zastrupitve – grob neznan;

- Bruno Fon, podnarednik, padel 23. 9. 1916 v Amzači – Dobrudža, vojaški grob neznan;

Soldiers and corporals – twenty-five (25) or 60 percent.

Out of respect to the fallen soldiers and mainly due to the fact that the location of known graveyards as well as graveyards and memorial plaques that still need to be erected (after reaching an international agreement), I am presenting, for the first time, a list of all (42) Slovenian volunteers, in alphabetical order, that were killed in action. Immediately after the end of the war, the Serbian Supreme Command erected the previously identified military cemeteries, tombs, graves and memorial plaques. In Thessaloniki the Serbian military cemetery is Zejtinlik. There is a Serbian military tomb with a monument in Medžidiji as well as in Dobrudža. In Tien near Paris, there is only a Serbian military tomb. Smaller military tombs with memorial plaques are located in other locations as well as on the Cer Mountain, the island Krk, the Kajmakčalan Mountain, the Bukovik Mountain etc.

Although many years have passed since the battles for the liberation of Serbia in which Slovenian volunteers sacrificed their lives, and even though moss and grass have covered the graves, both countries should maintain the cemeteries of the dead soldiers. This is the only way we will preserve the memory of the courageous Slovenian volunteers which sacrificed their lives for Serbian freedom. This is the least we can do to say thanks.

Awarded Slovenian volunteers in the Serbian Army, 1912-1918

No official information could be found about award recipients in the archives of the Serbian Army. It should be mentioned that in the Serbian Army awards were usually bestowed on the battlefield, moments after the fight finished. It is therefore understandable that there simply is no detailed information on the recipients (mainly soldiers, non-commissioned officers and lower officers) and the type of awards which they were presented.

 - Franc Žgajnar, vojak, padel 25. 8. 1916 v Karasinanu, Dobrudža – vojaški grob neznan.

Srbsko vrhovno poveljstvo je takoj po vojni poskrbelo za ureditev že prej določenih vojaških pokopališč, grobnic, grobov in spominskih znamenj. Tako je v Solunu srbsko vojaško pokopališče Zejtinlik, v Medžidiji v Dobrudži pa srbska vojaška grobnica s spomenikom, v Tienu pri Parizu pa srbska vojaška grobnica. Manjše vojaške grobnice s spominskimi znamenji so tudi na drugih mestih (na Ceru, otočku Krfu, Kajmakčalanu, v Bukoviku in drugje).

Čeprav je od opisanih bitk minilo že veliko let in so grobovi naštetih zaraščeni, bi obe državi morali poskrbeti za grobišča padlih vojakov. Le tako bomo ohranili spomin na pogumne slovenske dobrovoljce, ki so se žrtvovali za srbsko svobodo.

Odlikovani slovenski dobrovoljci v srbski vojski 1912–1918

Uradnih podatkov o odlikovancih v arhivih srbske vojske ni bilo mogoče najti. Odlikovanja v srbski vojski so največkrat delili kar na bojišču po boju, zato je razumljivo, da podrobnih podatkov o prejemnikih in vrsti odlikovanj ni. To velja predvsem za vojake, podčastnike in nižje častnike oz. za podeljevanje »nižjih« odlikovanj.

Iz časopisnih opisov, predvsem iz vojaškega časnika RATNIK (Bojevnik), delno ohranjene dobrovoljske zbirke in Vlahovićeve knjižice o vitezih Karađorđeve zvezde z meči sem zato zbral le slovenske dobrovoljce, odlikovane z najvišjimi srbskimi in tujimi odlikovanji. To so bili:

- Franjo Cajs, rez. častnik – dobrovoljec 1. polka 1. brigade 1. srbske dobrovoljske divizije 1916 v Odesi, nosilec Karađorđeve zvezde z

I have selected from newspaper articles, mostly from the RATNIK (Warrior) military newspaper, a partly preserved collection of volunteers and from the Vlahović book on Knights Bestowed with the medal of Karađorđe's Star with Swords, only those Slovenian volunteers that were awarded the highest Serbian and foreign awards. The descriptions of heroic acts of the listed and other unknown Slovenian volunteers are extremely important and interesting and would probably require an entire novel to be written. This applies in particular to Leopold Kovač, who was awarded the highest military award. Not to mention the legendary Natalija Bjelajac (Antonija Javornik) from Maribor and others.

Slovenian volunteers in the Serbian Army – Doctors and Intellectuals

The composition of Slovenian volunteers in the Serbian Army was on a very high intellectual level, for the faculty intellectuals (82) presented 14.46 percent of all volunteers. They are included in the number of 175 reserve officers and represent 30.86 percent of all Slovenian volunteers. This is very important information.

Presented is the specific data of the intellectual summit of the Slovenian volunteers:

The doctors (42), who were the first volunteers in the Serbian Army, predominated. Thus, I am presenting (in alphabetical order) the total number of individual Slovenian doctors, by year, with information about them:

- odlikovan s Karađorđeve zvezdo z meči, zaračni napačnega naslova so mu odlikovanje vročili šele leta 1934;
- Anton Zupanič, dobrovoljec – kaplar srbske vojske 1914, nosilec Karađorđeve zvezde z meči.

Zanimivi bi bili opisi junaških dejanj naštetih in drugih neznanih slovenskih dobrovoljev. Verjetno bi jih bilo za cel roman. To velja zlasti za Leopolda Kovača, ki je kot vojak dobil najvišje srbsko vojaško odlikovanje, pa legendarno Natalijo Bjelajac oz. Antonijo Javornik iz Maribora in druge.

Slovenski dobrovoljci v srbski vojski – zdravniki in drugi intelektualci

Sestava slovenskih dobrovoljev v srbski vojski je bila na zelo visoki intelektualni ravni, saj je bilo fakultetno izobraženih 82 dobrovoljev ali 14,46 odstotka vseh. Šteti so med 175 rez. častnikov in predstavljajo 30,86 odstotka vseh slovenskih dobrovoljev. Oba podatka sta zelo pomembna.

Navajam konkretne podatke intelektualnega vrha med slovenskim dobrovoljci:

Prevladovali so zdravniki (42), saj so bili med prvimi dobrovoljci v srbski vojski. Zato navajam po letih skupno število in podatke (po abecednem seznamu) o slovenskih zdravnikih:

There were 12 active officers. They were mostly active Austro-Hungarian officers, which deserted directly to the Serbian Army (Lieutenant Javornik Martin) or voluntarily entered the Serbian Army as Russian or Italian prisoners. Allow me to mention them:

Gržina Vladimir, Lieutenant; Fon Vekoslav, Major; Hudina Josip, Lieutenant Colonel (judge); Janež Vinko (Bosanac Vinko), Second Lieutenant, Javornik Martin, Captain; Kobler Maks, Captain, 1st Class; Kolar Milan, Second Lieutenant (military judge); Kos Janko, Second Lieutenant; Kraigher Jurij, Second Lieutenant – a pilot, Dr. Pless, Captain; Šircelj Jože, Captain and Vukasović – Stibilj Janko, Colonel.

Captain Martin Javornik, the first who deserted from the Austro-Hungarian Army and who died in the Battle of Cer, will be remembered for his great courage. In some ways, his fame was taken over by his niece Antonija Javornik or Natalija Bjelajac, the first Slovenian female volunteer, who received was wounded twelve times. She had the rank of Sergeant in the Serbian Military and received twelve of the highest Serbian and European awards. The Serbian state should set up a monument for both of them in Maribor.

Jurij Kraigher, an Austro-Hungarian military pilot from Postojna, who deserted to the Italians who afterwards imprisoned him due to suspicion, does not follow behind by inventiveness. The Italians released him due to endeavours of his acquaintances and friends. He afterwards claimed himself to be one of the first pilots of the Serbian Aviation (unit).

ali italijanski ujetniki prostovoljno pristopili v srbsko vojsko. Ti so bili:

Vladimir Gržina, poročnik; Vekoslav Fon, major; Josip Hudina, podpolkovnik (sodni); Vinko Janež (Vinko Bosanac), podporočnik; Martin Javornik, kapetan; Maks Kobler, kapetan 1. razreda; Milan Kolar, podporočnik (vojaški sodnik); Janko Kos, podporočnik; Jurij Kraigher, podporočnik – pilot; dr. Pless, kapetan; Jože Šircelj, kapetan; in Janko Stibilj - Vukasović, polkovnik.

Med najbolj pogumnimi je bil kapetan Martin Javornik, ki je prvi dezertiral iz avstro-ogrške vojske in padel v cerski bitki. Njegovo poslanstvo je prevzela nečakinja Antonija Javornik oz. Natalija Bjelajac, prva slovenska dobrovoljka, dvanajstkrat ranjena, s činom narednice srbske vojske ter dvanajstimi najvišjimi srbskimi in evropskimi vojaškimi odlikovanji. Obema bi srbska država morala postaviti spomenik v Mariboru.

Po iznajdljivosti ni zaostajal podporočnik in avstro-ogrski vojaški pilot Jurij Kraigher iz Postojne, ki je z novim letalom dezertiral k Italijanom, ti pa so ga zaradi sumničenja preprosto zaprli. Po posredovanjih znancev in prijateljev so ga izpustili in zaslovel je kot eden od prvih pilotov srbskega letalstva. Kariero je pozneje nadaljeval v ZDA, predvsem v civilnem letalstvu. Med drugo svetovno vojno je dobil čin polkovnika in je obiskal maršala Tita v Drvarju tik pred zanimim zračnim desantom. Zanimivo je, da je obveščevalno plat drvarskega desanta pod šifro »Skok s konjem« na nemški strani vodil kapetan Franz Kraigher, daljni sorodnik Jurija Kraigherja.

Omeniti je treba tudi oba poveljnika dobrovoljskih enot v Italiji in Sibiriji. Dr. Ljudevit Pivko je bil »samo« rez. kapetan, zato predstavljam le kapetana Jožeta Šircelja, poveljnika Jugoslovanskega dobrovoljskega polka Matije Gubca v Tomsku v Sibiriji. V izjemno zapletenih vojnih in geografskih razmerah (oktobrska revolucija, Sibirija, zima) je uspel pripeljati svojo enoto prek celotne Sibirije do pristanišča Vladivostok, od koder jih je zavezniška ladja pripeljala v domovino.

Občudovanje si zaslubi Janko Stibilj – Vukasović, polkovnik srbske vojske. Rojen je bil 1851 v Vrtovini pri Ajdovščini, končal je gimnazijo, pomorsko šolo in nekaj časa služil v avstro-ogrski vojni mornarici. Že 1887 se je v

Kraigher continued his career in the USA, mainly in civil aviation. During the Second World War he was promoted to the rank of Colonel and visited Marshall Tito in Drvar just before the reputed air raid. It is extremely interesting that German intelligence of the Drvar air raid, under the code »jump with a horse«, was led by Captain Kraigher Franz who was a distant relative of Jurij Kraigher.

We should also mention both commanders of the volunteer units in Italy and in Siberia. Because Dr. Ljudevit Pivko was "only" a reserve Captain, I will also mention Captain Jože Šircely, commander of the Matija Gubec Yugoslavian Volunteer Regiment in Tomsk, Siberia. Even in extremely complicated war and geographical circumstances (the October Revolution and Siberian winter) Captain Šircelj managed to bring his unit across Siberia to the Port of Vladivostok from where an Allied ship took them back to their homeland.

Vukasović - Stibilj Janko, commander of the Serbian Army deserves special admiration. Born in 1851 in Vrtovina near Ajdovščina, he finished high school and a Navy academy. He later served in the Austro-Hungarian navy for a time. In 1887, he headed to Belgrade and joined the volunteers in the Serbian Army. He first headed to Bosnia and Montenegro where he fought against the Turks. Because of his courage and his military talent he was promoted to the rank of sergeant in 1877. He thus joined the regular Serbian Army and received the rank of Lieutenant. At the same time, he was bestowed several awards due to his actions in these battles. In 1885, he was awarded a Takovski Cross and soon after became a battalion and a regiment commander. In the Balkan War in 1912 he became a Commander of the Serbian War Command and a commander of the military gendarmerie. At the beginning of the First World War in 1914 he protected Belgrade with gendarmerie. Afterwards, he participated in the retreat of the gendarmerie across Albania after which he maintained order at the Macedonian Front for two years. He also participated in propaganda actions for the recruitment of volunteers in the USA. In 1919, after the breakthrough of the Macedonian Front he was sent to Slovenia and with the rank of Colonel was appointed to the position of assistant to the Drava Division Commander. He retired after two years. He died in Ljubljana in 1923 and is buried in his home town.

Zato je vstopil v redno srbsko vojsko, dobil čin podporočnika, hkrati pa si je v bojih pridobil več odlikovanj. Leta 1885 je dobil takovski križ ter kmalu zatem postal bataljonski in polkovni poveljnik. V balkanski vojni 1912 je bil poveljnik glavnega dela srbskega vojnega poveljstva in vojaške žandarmerije. Ob začetku svetovne vojne 1914 je z orožniki branil Beograd. Potem se je z delom orožnikov udeležil umika čez Albanijo, nato je dve leti skrbel za red na solunski fronti. Udeleževal se je tudi propagandnih akcij za pridobivanje dobrovoljcev v ZDA. Po preboju solunske fronte je bil 1919 poslan v Slovenijo in kot polkovnik postavljen za pomočnika poveljnika dravske divizije. Dve leti pozneje se je upokojil in umrl 1923 v Ljubljani. Pokopan je v domačem kraju.

Analytical conclusions

The enclosed list of Slovenian volunteers, in alphabetical order, shows that for the time being 567 Slovenian volunteers in the Serbian Army have been identified, among which there are 175 officers (30.86 percent), 50 non-commissioned officers (8.82 percent) – 32 sergeants, sub-sergeants and 18 corporals and 343 soldiers (60.49 percent). Mladi skladatelj, vojak in dobrovoljec je v Taškentu 1916 napisal skladbo z naslovom Dobrovoljsko geslo:

Vrag naš ni še strt, ni še strt,
Geslo sinov majke Slave:
Zmaga ali smrt ali smrt, zmaga, zmaga, zmaga ali smrt.

Analitični sklepi

Iz priloženega abecednega seznama slovenskih dobrovoljcev je razvidno, da je doslej identificiranih 567 slovenskih dobrovoljcev srbske vojske, med njimi 175 častnikov (30,86 odstotka), 50 podčastnikov (8,82 odstotka) – 32 narednikov / podnarednikov in 18 kaplarjev ter 343 vojakov (60,49 odstotka). Za precej dobrovoljcev (30), omenjanih v spominski literaturi, ni bilo mogoče ugotoviti drugih podatkov razen priimkov. Prav tako za 279 dobrovoljcev (polovico) ni navedenega čina – položaja, pa so, po izkušnjah v podobnih primerih, razvrščeni med vojake. Slovenski dobrovoljci so se zelo radi fotografirali in prav na podlagi fotodokumentacije je mogoče zelo natančno ugotoviti število častnikov in zdravnikov. Po drugi strani pa so imeli – razumljivo – zelo malo priložnosti za skupinsko fotografiranje.

Srbski dobrovoljski korpus v Rusiji je bil sestavljen iz 1. in 2. srbske dobrovoljske divizije ter tudi iz Jugoslovanskega dobrovoljskega polka Matije Gubca v Tomsku v Sibiriji. V teh enotah je bilo identificiranih 249 slovenskih dobrovoljcev:

- 1. srbska dobrovoljska divizija: 149;
- 2. srbska dobrovoljska divizija: 14;
- Srbski dobrovoljski korpus: 47 oz. 46 (če odštejemo veterana – dobrovoljca iz 1914);
- Jugoslovanski dobrovoljski polk Matije Gubca: 39.

Od 210 slovenskih dobrovoljcev Srbskega dobrovoljskega korpusa v Rusiji je prišlo na solunsko fronto samo 50 dobrovoljcev ali 23,81 odstotka oz. 20,1 odstotka (vštevši polk Matije Gubca), kar je strašljiv podatek. Osnovni surnames could be obtained. For 279 volunteers (50 percent) there is no rank or position stated, but on the basis of similar examples they are listed among the soldiers. Due to the fact that Slovenian volunteers were fond of having their pictures taken we can very accurately identify the number of officers and doctors on the basis of this photographic documentation. On the other hand, it is understandable that non-commissioned officers and ordinary soldiers had fewer opportunities for group photos.

The Serbian Volunteer Corps in Russia was composed of the 1st and the 2nd Serbian Volunteer Division and the Matija Gubec Yugoslavian Volunteer Regiment in Tomsk, Siberia. 249 Slovenians volunteers were identified in the listed units:

- The 1st Serbian Volunteer Division: 149.
- The 2nd Serbian Volunteer Division: 14.
- The Serbian Volunteer Corps: 47 or 46 (if we do not count in a veteran – volunteer from 1914).
- The Matija Gubec Yugoslavian Volunteer Regiment: 39.

Out of 210 Slovenian volunteers in the Serbian Volunteer Corps in Russia only 50 volunteers or 23.81 or 20.1 percent (counting in the Matija Gubec Regiment) arrived to the Macedonian Front, which was alarming. The main reason was problems during the transport from Russia to Thessaloniki. As known, the Matija Gubec Yugoslavian Volunteer Regiment headed towards home on a difficult road across Siberia, after which it sailed off from the Port of Vladivostok with a ship which arrived in Dubrovnik in 1920. Other units also witnessed a great decrease during the drive from Arhangelsk across France and Italy to Thessaloniki.

According to some data of the Serbian Supreme Command 141 Slovenian volunteers received the status of "Thessaloniki fighter" which does not correspond to the actual data. According to my findings, 194 Slovenian volunteers received the status of a Thessaloniki fighter. Their numbers are as follows:

- 50 members of the Serbian Volunteer Corps.
- 45 volunteers from Slovenia.
- 55 volunteers from Nocera Umbra.
- 27 expatriates – volunteers.
- 10 members of the Volunteer corps of the Duke Vuk.
- 7 volunteers from the Pivko's Battalion.

During the breakthrough of the Macedonian Front, Slovenian volunteers participated in the following units of the Serbian Army:

- The Morava Division: 22, out of which 4 were from Russia, 18 from Slovenia.

razlog so bile težave med prevozom iz Rusije do Soluna. Jugoslovanski dobrovoljski polk Matije Gubca je odšel v domovino po težavni poti čez Sibirijo, iz pristanišča Vladivostok pa je oplul z ladjo, ki je prišla v Dubrovnik šele 1920. Osip je bil velik tudi v druge enote med vožnjo iz Arhangelska prek Francije in Italije do Soluna.

Po nekaterih podatkih srbskega vrhovnega poveljstva naj bi status »solunskega borca« pridobilo 141 slovenskih dobrovoljcev, kar pa se ne ujema z mojimi ugotovitvami, da ga je pridobilo kar 194 slovenskih dobrovoljcev, in sicer:

- 50 pripadnikov Srbskega dobrovoljskega korpusa;
- 45 dobrovoljcev iz Slovenije;
- 55 dobrovoljcev iz Nocere Umbre;
- 27 izseljencev – dobrovoljcev;
- 10 pripadnikov Dobrovoljskega odreda vojnike Vuka in
- 7 dobrovoljcev iz Pivkovega bataljona.

Slovenski dobrovoljci so v preboju solunske fronte sodelovali v teh enotah srbske vojske:

- Moravska divizija: 22, od teh 4 iz Rusije, 18 iz Slovenije;
- Donavska divizija: 26, od teh 13 iz Rusije in prav toliko iz Slovenije;
- Timoška divizija: 5, od teh 2 iz Rusije, 3 iz Slovenije;
- Šumadijska divizija: 1 iz Rusije;
- Jugoslovanska divizija: 11, od teh 6 iz Rusije, 5 iz Slovenije;
- Neidentificirane enote: 30, od teh 24 iz Rusije, 6 iz Slovenije in
- Dobrovoljski odred (1916): 10

Za 74 solunskih borcev je torej ugotovljeno, v katerih enotah srbske vojske so se bojevali. Za 30 dobrovoljcev iz Srbskega dobrovoljskega korpusa, kot tudi za izseljence (27) in dobrovoljce iz Nocere Umbre (55), skupno 112, ni bilo mogoče ugotoviti, v katerih enotah so bili.

Od 130 dobrovoljcev Jugoslovanskega bataljona kapetana Pivka se jih je le sedem udeležilo preboja solunske fronte, večina pa je po prihodu in mučnem čakanju v Boki Kotorski in Tivtu nazadnje odšla domov. Tako jih srbsko vrhovno poveljstvo ni štelo med solunske borce. Vsi dobrovoljci omenjenega Pivkovega bataljona pa so uvrščeni na abecedni seznam

Altogether there were 74 Thessaloniki fighters for which it has been determined in which Serbian Army unit they fought in. The name of the unit could not be identified for 30 volunteers from the Serbian Volunteer Corps as well as for the expatriates (27) and volunteers from the Nocera Umbra (55), which makes 112 altogether.

Out of 130 volunteers in the Captain Pivko's Yugoslavian Volunteer Battalion, only seven participated in the breakthrough of the Macedonian Front, while most of them shortly after their arrival and anxious waiting in Boka Kotorska and Tivit headed for home. Thus, the Serbian Supreme Command did not register them as Thessaloniki fighters. Nevertheless, all members of the mentioned Pivko's Battalion are enlisted on the alphabetical list of the identified Slovenian volunteers, only now for the first time presented to the Slovenian public. But the original list of Slovenian deserters who came to this battalion from the Austro-Hungarian Army, which joined the Italian (Allied) side together with their commander, is not known.

identificiranih slovenskih dobrovoljcev, ki je prvič predstavljen slovenski javnosti. Ni pa znan prvoten seznam slovenskih deserterjev tega bataljona iz avstro-ogrsko vojske, ki so skupaj s svojim poveljnikom prestopili na italijansko (zavezniško) stran.

Med slovenske dobrovoljce je uvrščenih vseh 39 pripadnikov Jugoslovanskega dobrovoljskega polka Matije Gubca iz Tomska v Sibiriji, ki so se vrnili v domovino šele 1920.

Posebna kategorija so »koroški borci« oz. slovenski dobrovoljci srbske vojske (21), ki so po demobilizaciji vnovič postali dobrovoljci mariborskega 45. polka in nekaterih drugih enot, sodelujočih v znani ofenzivi na Koroškem leta 1918/1919. Večina je sodelovala v bojih v Dobrudži (8) in na solunski fronti (8), le dva sta prišla med koroške borce naravnost iz Rusije, trije pa so se naknadno prijavili kot dobrovoljci srbske vojske.

V prvo kategorijo slovenskih dobrovoljcev pa je treba šteti vse zdravnike in medicince, ki so sodelovali v obeh balkanskih in prvi svetovni vojni, pa tudi tiste, ki so se vključili v srbsko vojsko leta 1914. Avgusta 1914 je bilo v srbski vojski 18 slovenskih dobrovoljcev, vsi so sodelovali tudi v cerski bitki. Leto pozneje je bilo v srbski vojski po nekaterih podatkih že 25 slovenskih dobrovoljcev (dokumentirano navajam samo 24). Nisem pa mogel preveriti podatka, da je v kolubarski bitki prešlo iz avstro-ogrsko v srbsko vojsko še 10 slovenskih dobrovoljcev. Mlajšim raziskovalcem torej ne bo zmanjkalo dela.

V tragičnem umiku srbske vojske čez Albanijo naj bi sodelovalo tudi 19 slovenskih dobrovoljcev. Nisem mogel preveriti, kdo od njih je umrl v albanskih planinah. Znan je le podatek, da je 17 slovenskih dobrovoljcev prišlo na otok Krf. Enega so zaradi zdravljenja prepeljali v Francijo (kjer je umrl), sedem so jih napotili v Odeso zaradi vzpostavljanja dobrovoljskih enot srbske vojske, deset pa v Dobrovoljski odred vojvode Vuka. Borci tega odreda so si tudi prvi prislužili naziv »solunskega borca«, saj so že 1916 jurišali na vrh Kajmakčalana. Trije slovenski dobrovoljci so tam tudi padli, skupaj s svojim četniškim vojvodo Vukom.

Padlo in umrlo je 42 slovenskih dobrovoljcev ali 7,41 odstotka, torej veliko. Posebno pomembno je, da je bilo med padlimi kar 24 odstotkov častnikov. Torej so se izpostavljeni v

The 39 members of the Matija Gubec Yugoslavian Volunteer Regiment in Siberia who returned home in 1920 are also considered as Slovenian volunteers.

The "Carinthian fighters" or Slovenian volunteers in the Serbian Army (21) who after the demobilisation again became volunteers in the 45th Maribor Regiment and some other units, participating in the celebrated offensive in Carinthia in 1918/1919, belong to a special category. Most of them participated in the Dobrudja Battles (8) and in the battles at the Macedonian Front (8). Only two of them joined Carinthian fighters directly from Russia and three subsequently joined as Serbian Army volunteers.

All doctors and medical students that participated in both Balkan Wars and in the First World War as well as Slovenian volunteers that joined the Serbian Army in 1914 unquestionably belong to the first category of volunteers. In August 1914, there were 18 Slovenian volunteers in the Serbian Army that also participated in the Battle of Cer. According to some data there were already 25 Slovenian volunteers in the Serbian Army the next year (I list only 24 of them that have been documented). However, I was not able to verify the data stating that that during the Battle of Kolubara another 10 Slovenian volunteers left the Austro-Hungarian and joined the Serbian Army. This is yet to be researched by younger researchers.

19 Slovenian volunteers supposedly participated in the tragic retreat of the Serbian Army across Albania. I could not verify which of them died in the Albanian mountains. It is known that 17 Slovenian volunteers arrived on the island Krf. One of them was transferred to France (where he died) during medical treatment, while seven of them were sent to Odessa for the formation of volunteer units of the Serbian Army and ten of them were transferred to the Volunteer Detachment of Duke Vuk. The fighters of this detachment were the first to win the title of the "Carniola fighter", since they assaulted the Kajmakcalan summit in 1916. Three Slovenian volunteers together with their chetnik Duke Vuk died there.

42 Slovenian volunteers or 7.41 percent died there. The number is large. It is especially important to mention that 24 percent of the officers were among those killed in action, meaning that they were involved in numerous fights and demonstrated Slovenian courage and fearlessness in the Serbian liberation wars. It should also be mentioned that Jenko August, one of the main ideologists of the Preporod Movement died in the Battle of Cer in 1914, thus demonstrating to his followers what a sacrifice for youthful ideals for the Yugoslavian community actually meant. We have bojih in tudi v srbskih osvobodilnih vojnah pokazali slovenski pogum in neustrašenost. Med prvimi je leta 1914 v cerski bitki padel Avgust Jenko, eden od glavnih ideologov preporodcev. Njegovi privrženci so ob tem spoznali, kaj pomeni žrtvovanje za mladostne ideale o jugoslovanski skupnosti. Locirali smo grobove slovenskih dobrovoljcev, obe državi pa naj poskrbita za njihovo ureditev po mednarodnem vojnem pravu.

Poleg 42 zdravnikov je bilo med slovenskimi dobrovoljci še 42 drugih intelektualcev, skupno 82, kar je več kot 14,46 odstotka slovenskih dobrovoljcev srbske vojske. Med njimi je umestno najprej omeniti 12 aktivnih častnikov, 9 pravnikov, 5 profesorjev, 4 novinarje, 3 inženirje, 2 književnika, 2 poslanca, 2 duhovnika in skladatelja. Če k tem prištejemo še preostalih 93 rezervnih častnikov, dobimo realno sliko, da so slovenski dobrovoljci izstopali tudi kvalitativno, saj so ti podatki odraz intelektualne veličine slovenskega dobrovoljskega gibanja nasploh. Če bi dodali še številki o sokolih (11) in preporodovcih (25), bi verjetno dobili še nekakšno ideolesko-politično sliko, včasih zelo pomembno za uspeh in preživetje na bojnem polju. Pomembna je bila za propagandno akcijo pridobivanja dobrovoljcev med ujetniki, saj so se ti odločali predvsem za idejo prihodnje jugoslovanske skupnosti.

18 slovenskih dobrovoljcev je prejelo najvišja srbska in tuja vojaška odlikovanja.

Sklenem lahko, da so bili slovenski dobrovoljci med prvimi v srbski vojski, in to v obdobju in okoliščinah, ko so jih najbolj potrebovali (Cer, Kolubara, Dobrudža, Kajmakčalan, Bukovik idr.). To so bili slovenski zdravniki z dr. Oražnom na čelu. Skupno število slovenskih dobrovoljcev presega povprečje drugih v srbski vojski, izjemna je bila njihova izobrazbena (intelektualna) struktura, pokazali so zelo velik pogum in požrtvovalnost. Patetično izraženo: velik krvni davek na oltarju srbske svobode.

Srbski narod ne bo nikoli pozabil tega slovenskega prispevka.

Avtorjev klic proti pozabi

Slovenski dobrovoljci v srbskih osvobodilnih vojnah so že zdavnaj pozabljena zgodovina.

O njih se skoraj nič ne ve v Srbiji, le malo v located the graves of Slovenian volunteers, but both countries have to be involved in erecting monuments within the framework of international military law.

Besides 42 doctors another 42 intellectuals need to be included, which makes 82 altogether that is 14.46 percent of Slovenian volunteers in the Serbian Army. Among them we must above all mention 12 active officers, 9 lawyers, 5 professors, 4 journalists, 3 engineers, 2 literates, 2 Members of Parliament, 2 priests and one composer. If we count the remaining 93 reserve officers to the latter we see that Slovenian volunteers stood out in the qualitative sense as well. The previously mentioned number is a reflection of the intellectual grandness of the Slovenian volunteer movement in general. If we add the number of the Sokol Organisation members (11) and the Preporod Movement members (25) to the latter we would probably get a ideological-political image which can be very important for success and survival in the battlefield. It was also very important for the propaganda action with a view to recruit new volunteers among the prisoners, since all volunteers were in general in favour of the idea of the future Yugoslavian community.

We must not forget that 18 Slovenian volunteers were awarded highest Serbian and foreign military decorations.

The main conclusion would be that Slovenian volunteers were one of the first volunteers in the Serbian Army at that time and under the circumstances needed the most (Cer, Kolubara, Dobrudža, Kajmakčalan, Bukovik battles and similar). They were Slovenian doctors lead by Dr. Oražen. In comparison to the number of other volunteers in the Serbian Army, Slovenian volunteers are predominant. Moreover, their educational (intellectual) level, their courage and their selflessness is outstanding. If we put pitifully: They are a "hefty blood tax" on the altar of Serbian freedom.

The Serbian nation will never forget the Slovenian contribution!

Author's appeal against oblivion

Slovenian volunteers in the Serbian liberation wars are a long forgotten history.

There is practically nothing known about them in Serbia and only little in Slovenia. If a little more time would pass, both countries would allow this to be forgotten and sink into oblivion. It is politics that chooses what will stay alive and live on in people's memory. And so far, politics has been very unfair to the volunteers. As if it was ashamed of them.

Sloveniji. Samo še nekaj časa bi minilo, pa bi v obeh državah pozabili nekaj, česar nikoli ne bi smeli. Politika izbira, kaj bo ostalo in živilo v spominu. Do dobrovoljcev je bila doslej zelo nepravična, kot bi se jih sramovala ...

Slovenski dobrovoljci, ki so se bojevali in žrtvovali življenja za srbski narod v njegovih osvobodilnih vojnah, morajo ostati nepozabljeni. Njihova veličina ni v številkah in zmaga, ki so jih pribujevali. So seme prijateljstva in otroci solidarnosti dveh slovanskih narodov, slovenskega in srbskega.

Iz njihove krvi in dejanj je zrasla povezava Slovencev in Srbov. Ta je nad vso politiko, a tudi proti politiki, ki razpihuje sovraštvo med Slovenci in Srbi.

Ohranjanje spominov na vojne dobrovoljce je predvsem naloga vojske Slovenije in Srbije. Žal to ni bilo mogoče prej, pa tudi danes ni dosti bolje. Toda prišel bo čas, ko bodo dobrovoljci v obeh državah dobili zgodovinsko mesto, ki jim pripada.

Slovenske dobrovoljce v srbski vojski bi bilo treba uvrstiti med druge slovenske vojne veterane. O njih bi morali več vedeti posebno v Srbiji. Slovenci so imeli prve časopisne novice že 1875, prvo brošuro 1913, zbornik svojih dobrovoljcev že od 1936, nekaj podatkov je tudi v nacionalni enciklopediji.

Nekako razumem, da po razpadu skupne države ne bo zelo prijazno sprejeto obujanje spominov na sokole, preporodovce in slovenske dobrovoljce srbske vojske. Vendar se ne bi smeli sramovati svoje skupne zgodovine.

V Srbiji vsako leto praznujemo obletnico cerske in kolubarske bitke. Počastimo spomin na žrtve in golgoto umika izmučene srbske vojske čez Albanijo. Preboj solunske fronte tudi uradno velja za uspešno sklepno dejanje srbske osvobodilne vojne. Pozabili pa smo na dobrovoljce, tudi slovenske.

Skoraj nič nismo vedeli o slovenskih dobrovoljcih, ki so sodelovali v teh bitkah in številni tudi žrtvovali življenja. Krivi smo mi, Srbi! Vedeti bi morali za 567 slovenskih dobrovoljcev, za 42 padlih, 10 nosilcev Karađorđeve zvezde z meči, za slovenske zdravnike – prve dobrovoljce srbske vojske, za dr. Oražna in njegovih 42 kolegov. Vedeti bi morali za neustrašno mladenko Antonijo Javornik, njenega strica, kapetana Martina Javornika, za polkovnika Janka Stibilja in številne druge.

Slovenian volunteers that fought and sacrificed their lives for the Serbian nation in its liberation wars must be remembered. Their greatness is not in numbers nor the victories they won but they are the seed of friendship and the children of solidarity of two Slavic nations, Slovenian and Serbian.

It was from their blood and actions that the bond between Slovenians and Serbians grew. This is a bond which is above any politics and also against any politics that fans hatred among Slovenians and Serbians.

The preservation of the memory of the war volunteers is principally the task of the Slovenian and Serbian Armed Forces. Regretfully, this has not been possible before and remains impossible to this day as well. But the time will come when volunteers in both countries will occupy a place in history which they deserve.

Slovenian volunteers in the Serbian Army should definitely be taken into account with other Slovenian veterans. There should be more said about them, especially in Serbia. Slovenians were acknowledged in newspapers already in 1875, in brochures already in 1913 and in collections of scientific papers in 1936. They also had a national encyclopedia.

I understand that after the dissolution of the mutual state the revival of memories of the members of the Sokol Organisation, the Preporod Movement and Slovenian volunteers in the Serbian Army would not be welcomed. Nonetheless, we should not be ashamed of our common history.

In Serbia, the anniversary of the Battle of Cer and the Battle of Kolubara is celebrated each year. We bow to the victims and the calvary of the retreat of the exhausted Serbian Army across Albania. The breakthrough of the Macedonian Front is officially celebrated as a successful closure of the Serbian liberation war. But we have forgotten the volunteers; we have forgotten Slovenian volunteers as well.

We knew practically nothing about Slovenian volunteers that participated in these battles; many of them sacrificed their lives in these battles. It is we the Serbs who are to blame. We should remember the 567 Slovenian volunteers, 42 of which were killed in action and 10 of which were awarded the Kakđorđe's Star with Swords. We should remember the Slovenian doctors – the first volunteers in the Serbian Army, we should remember Dr. Oražen and his 42 colleagues. We should remember the fearless young woman Antonija Javornik and her uncle, Captain Martin Javornik, about Colonel Janko Stibilj and many others.

Če bi vse to vedeli in se tega tudi spominjali, bi bilo morda marsikaj drugače.

Prijateljem v Sloveniji zato kličem: »Ne pozabimo, kar nas je s krvjo že povezalo!«

Proti pozabi so včasih vredni zlata tudi zaprašeni arhivski podatki ...

If we had remembered this, a lot of things might be different.

I therefore appeal to our friends in Slovenia: "Let us not forget what has bonded us by blood!"

Sometimes dusty archive information is a priceless means to fight forgetfulness.
